EDITORIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Professor Robert G. Crowder of Yale University succeeded me as Editor of Memory & Cognition on September 1, 1976. I am very pleased that he has agreed to accept this post. Professor Crowder is an able scientist and scholar who will give our journal devoted and abiding attention.

My association with Memory & Cognition has been a challenging and exciting one. I have enjoyed my term as Editor. I owe a special debt of gratitude to all of the fine people who assisted and supported the late Professor George E. Briggs and me in founding this journal; the contributions in this regard that were made by the late Clifford T. Morgan and the members of the Governing Board of the Psychonomic Society had special significance. My thanks go as well to our authors for their dedication and forbearance in helping us shape Memory & Cognition into a journal of the highest quality. I express my appreciation to Professor Irving Biederman, who has served as Associate Editor for the past 1½ years. Lastly, I acknowledge the help that we have received from a large cadre of colleagues who labored unselfishly as Consulting Editors to provide valuable advice to our authors and us.
