DATA GENERAL'S FOCUS MAGAZINE

The North American Data General Users Group unveiled the new Focus magazine at the group's annual meeting in August. Starting with the September issue, the NADGUG newsletter will become a monthly magazine with a circulation of 8,000. The repositioned Focus is being produced in cooperation with Turnkey Publishing, based in Austin, Texas.

For more than a decade, the North American Data General Users Group has promoted cooperative problem-solving among the people who use Data General computer equipment. In recent years, NADGUG and Data General Corporation have established the user group as an independent organization serving users and promoting communication between users and Data General.

The new Focus will use advertising revenues to finance expanded coverage of such subjects as computer system management, new products, network operations, data communications, and other technical topics. The magazine will also cover user group activities, as well as industry news that affects Data General and its customers. All NADGUG members will receive Focus as a benefit of membership.

For more information, contact Greg Farman, editor of Focus magazine, 5332 Thunder Creek Road, Suite 105, Austin, TX 78759.
