PATRICK AINLEY. Ainley is Professor of Training and Education at the University of Greenwich School of Education and Training, and has been writing and researching on schools, colleges, and universities since the UK Youth Training Schemes of the 1980s. His latest book with Martin Allen is Lost Generation? New Strategies for Youth and Education, Continuum: March 2010.

MARTIN ALLEN. Allen is a writer researcher and a part-time teacher at a comprehensive school in West London. He is an active member of the National Union of Teachers.

MOLLY BELLAMY. Bellamy works at the Institute of Work Based Learning at Middlesex University as the Director of Postgraduate and Undergraduate Programmes. She is interested in “Cultural Political Economy” (Norman Fairclough.) Her Doctoral Thesis (Institute of Education) is about the role of academic literacies as a vehicle for structural change in the knowledge-based economy. Recent publications include Bellamy, M. and Hawkes J. (2002). An Inter-textual Approach to Work Based Learning, in Knowledge, Learning and Work Hollifield D. (Ed), University of Wales Press.

KEVIN FARNSWORTH (UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD). Farnsworth’s interests centre primarily on business power and the various ways business is able to influence the shape of social and public policy—for instance, at the level of intergovernmental organisations and within different forms of capitalist states to frame the power, views, interests, and needs of business and “rival” interests. Recent publications include Corporate Power and Social Policy in a Global Economy: Bristol: Policy Press (2004).

DENIS GLEESON (UNIVERSITY OF WARWICK). Gleeson is a sociologist and Professor of Education at the University of Warwick. He has published widely on the relationship between the state, education policy, and employment. He is particularly interested in the class-based nature of vocational education and training and its impact on the distribution of power, pedagogy, and practice in society—particularly among learners, professionals, and leaders. His recent work focuses on governance and accountability in the remaking of professional cultures in a postmarket environment. Recent publications include (with Knights, D.) “Challenging Dualism: Professionalism in ‘Troubled Times’” Sociology 40 (2), 277–295 (2006).

ANTHONY GREEN. Green lectures in Sociology of Education at the Institute of Education, University of London, co-convenes Marxism and Education Renewing Dialogues (MERD), and is Series Editor for Marxism and Education.

KEN JONES. Jones is Professor of Education at Goldsmiths, University of London. His research focuses on two areas: the first is policy and its contestation (“Schooling in Western Europe: The New Order and its Adversaries” 2008); the second is the (re)emergence and development of “creativity” as a theme in educational and cultural policy. Recent work includes “Culture and Creative Learning” (Arts Council England, 2009).

ALPESH MAISURIA. Maisuria is a Senior Lecturer, is a Fellow of the Higher Education Academy, and is affiliated to the Institute of Education University of London, UK, and Uppsala University, Sweden. He publishes on aspects of social justice and education, particularly the intersection of social class with “race.” His most recent work has examined the efficacy of Critical Race Theory and the concept of racialisation in a UK, U.S., and Swedish context. He co-convenes the Marxism and Education Renewing Dialogues (MERD) seminar series.

PHILIP A. WOODS is the Chair in Educational Leadership and Policy at University of Gloucestershire.

TERRY WRIGLEY (UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH). Wrigley’s research interests include school development (especially schools in challenging circumstances), democratic schools, school self-evaluation methodologies. and active learning for active citizenship. Recent publications include Another School is Possible London: Bookmarks/Trentham (2006).
