He holds a BA in Middle Eastern Studies and International Relations (the Hebrew University, summa cum laude), and an MA in Contemporary Middle Eastern Studies (the Hebrew University, summa cum laude). He is currently completing his doctoral dissertation on “Representations of urban women in the Egyptian popular cinema between the 1940s and 1960s” at the Hebrew University.

Ann Braude serves as director of the Women’s Studies in Religion Program and Senior Lecturer on American Religious History at Harvard Divinity School. Her publications include Saints and Sisters: Women and Religion in America (2008), Transforming the Faiths of Our Fathers: Women Who Changed American Religion (2004), and Radical Spirits: Spiritualism and Women’s Rights in 19th-Century America (1989, 2000), as well as articles on women in Judaism, Christian Science, and American religious life.

José Casanova is professor of Sociology and senior fellow at the Berkley Center for Religion, Peace, and World Affairs at Georgetown University, where he heads the Program on Religion Globalization and the Secular. He has published widely in the areas of sociological theory, religion and politics, transnational migration, and globalization. His best-known work, Public Religions in the Modern World (1994) has become a modern classic in the field. He is presently working on two main projects, “Rethinking secularization: A global comparative perspective” and “Transnational migration, transnational religion and diversity.” He is a member of the Social Science Research Council Advisory Committee for Religion and International Affairs.

Daphna Hacker is assistant professor at the Buchman Faculty of Law and the NCJW Women and Gender Studies Program at Tel Aviv University. She received her LLB from Hebrew University, her LLM (magna cum laude) from American University Washington College of Law, and her PhD (magna cum laude) from the Sociology and Anthropology Department at Tel Aviv University. Her studies focus on the intersection between family, law, and gender.

Hanna Herzog is professor of Sociology in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Tel Aviv University, of which she served as Head (1998–2001). She is one of the founders of the NCJW Women and Gender Studies Program, and since 2009, Head of the program. She is former president of the Association for Israel Studies. Her numerous articles deal with issues in political sociology, gender and politics, ethnic and racial relations, sociology of generation, and gender knowledge. She is the author of Gendering Politics: Women in Israel, coauthor of Sex Gender Politics—Women in Israel (1999), and editor of several books on modern Israeli society. She serves as academic director of the Program on Civil Society at the Van Leer Jerusalem Institute.

Gertrud Hüwelmeier is senior lecturer and research fellow at the Humboldt University of Berlin, Department of European Ethnology. Her work focuses on the intersections of religion, gender, and transnationalism. She is the director of a research project on “Transnational networks, religion and new migration,” exploring religious diversity among Vietnamese and Ghanaian migrants. Recent publications include the coedited volume Traveling Spirits: Migrants, Markets and Mobilities (2009).

Pnina Lahav is professor of Law and Law Alumni Scholar at Boston University where she teaches constitutional law, political and civil liberties, and foreign affairs. Her scholarship includes freedom of expression, biography, women’s rights and constitutional law. Professor Lahav authored the acclaimed biography Judgment in Jerusalem, Chief Justice Simon Agranat and the Zionist Century (1997) and (with others) The History of Law in a Multi-Cultural Society (2002).

Anat Lapidot-Firilla is a senior research fellow at the Van Leer Jerusalem Institute and the academic director of its Mediterranean program. She teaches at the Department of International Relations, at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. She received her BA in History of the Middle East from Tel Aviv University, and holds a PhD from the Department of Politics, the University of Durham, UK. She has been granted numerous scholarships and awards, including the Wingate Scholarship, the HIRIJW Research Grant, awarded by Brandeis University and the YTS at the Harry S. Truman Research Institute for the Advancement of Peace (2003–06). Her research focuses on various aspects of religion, politics, gender and identity conflicts, and on informal diplomacy, with an emphasis on Turkey.

Saba Mahmood is associate professor of Anthropology at the University of California Berkeley. She is the author of Politics of Piety: The Islamic Revival and the Feminist Subject (2004), which received the Victoria Schuck Award from the American Association of Political Science. Her work appears in a variety of journals including Cultural Anthropology, Boston Review, Social Research, American Ethnologist, Public Culture, and Cultural Studies. Mahmood is the recipient of the Carnegie Corporation Scholar Award (2007), and the Frederick Burkhardt fellowship from the American Council of Learned Societies (2009–10). Her current project focuses on politics of religious freedom in the Middle East.

Fatima Sadiqi is president of the Centre for Studies and Research on Women and the newly created nongovernmental organization ISIS for Women and Development (Fez); professor of Linguistics and Gender Studies (University of Fez); editor-in-chief of the journal Languages and Linguistics; member, editorial board of Gender and Language; and National Coordinator of SafetyNET. She has published books and articles on women, gender, Islam, and language. Her latest publication is Women Writing Africa (2009).

Mary C. Segers is professor of Political Science at Rutgers University in Newark, New Jersey, where she teaches courses in religion and politics and in political theory. She is the author of 50 scholarly essays and 7 books, including The Catholic Church and Abortion Politics: A View From the States (1992). She was a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellow at Princeton University, and a Ford Foundation Lecturer in Women's Studies in Religion at Harvard Divinity School. She held a Henry Luce Fellowship in Theology at Harvard from 1987 to 1989. In 1999, she served as Fulbright Distinguished Chair in American Studies at the University of Warsaw.
