CONTRIBUTORS

Cassandra Auble is a doctoral student at West Virginia University. Her current research examines the cultural significance of precious stones in late medieval and early modern England. She has published reviews and short essays in the Sixteenth Century Journal, the Journal of British Studies, and Calliope.

Debra Barrett-Graves, a professor of English at California State University, East Bay, teaches courses in Renaissance literature. Carole Levin, Jo Eldridge Carney, and Barrett-Graves are among the authors of Extraordinary Women of the Medieval and Renaissance World (2000) and Elizabeth I: Always Her own Free Woman (2003). As the recipient of The Robert A. Miller Memorial Award for her article on “Edmund Spenser’s Use of the Poison-Tipped Tongue in The Faerie Queene” (2005–2006), Barrett-Graves has earned recognition for her work on emblematics in Edmund Spenser’s The Faerie Queene. Barrett-Graves serves as the US Representative of The Society for Emblem Studies, as the vice president of the Queen Elizabeth I Society, and as the vice president of the South Central Renaissance Conference. Current publications and projects include articles on the visual symbolism of court display in the reign of Elizabeth I, biographical studies on the lives of early modern women, and the use of emblematics in Spenser’s The Shepheardes Calender.

Antonio Bernat Vistarini is a professor of Spanish Golden Age literature at the Universitat de les Illes Balears (Spain). He has published extensively in this area, including Francisco Manuel de Melo 1608–1666: Textos y contextos del Barroco peninsular and numerous studies on Cervantes and on emblematic literature, such as the Enciclopedia de Emblemas Españoles Ilustrados (with John T. Cull). He has edited works on Humanism and the Baroque by Gracián, Fray Luis de León, Ferrer de Valdecebro, and others. With Dr. Tamás Sajó he created the Studiolum digital edition project (www.studiolum.com). He is the director of the Medio Maravedí collection of Medieval and Golden Age texts and studies. He serves on numerous editorial boards of prestigious international journals, including Cervantes (Cervantes Society of America), Conceptos, Studia Aurea, and Imago. He has organized two international conferences on Cervantes in collaboration with the Asociación de Cervantistas (for which he served as secretary for years) and one on emblems in collaboration with the Sociedad Española de Emblemática. Since 2007 he has been the director of his University Press, Edicions UIB.

Effie Botonaki teaches European literature at the Hellenic Open University. She is the author of several articles on early modern diaries and autobiographies, and of a book, titled Seventeenth-Century English Women's Autobiographical Writings: Disclosing Enclosures (2004). Her current research, for which she has won a Research Award of Excellence by Aristotle University, focuses on the relationship of the Stuart court masques to the political turmoil of the first half of the seventeenth century. Her latest publication in this field is "Elizabeth's Presence in the Jacobean Masque" in Representations of Elizabeth I in Early Modern Culture (2011).
