2. But see the reservations expressed about the emphasis on 'fractional reserve banking' by Ann Pettifor at <http://www.primeeconomics.org/wp-content/uploads/2013/01/Ingham-Review-Essay-FINAL-1st-January-2013js3.pdf>. She correctly makes the point that adherence to the concept of fractional reserve banking implies (a) that lending is constrained or disciplined by deposits, and (b) that banks have made sufficient, if limited provision for liabilities and losses by linking loans to deposits or reserves, neither of which propositions is accurate.
