Saladin Ambar is Associate Professor of political science at Lehigh University. He is the author of How Governors Built the Modern American Presidency (2012) and Malcolm X at Oxford Union: Racial Politics in a Global Era (2014). His next book, American Cicero: Mario Cuomo and the Defense of Liberalism in America, chronicles the political career and thought of former New York governor Mario M. Cuomo. A 2008 graduate of Rutgers University's PhD program in political science, he is a former Fellow at the Miller Center of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

David J. Andersen is Assistant Professor of political science at Iowa State University. His training is in American politics, where he focuses on studying political psychology, political behavior, and American elections. Andersen is an expert on using experiments to study political behavior and political psychology, and is among the most active users of the Dynamic Process Tracing Environment (DPTE), a free, web-based platform (www.processtracing.org) for designing and running experiments. Andersen received his PhD from Rutgers University in 2011 and has been a member of the faculty at Iowa State University since 2013.

Gbemende Johnson is Assistant Professor of government at Hamilton College. Her research interests include American institutions, judicial politics, and executive branch politics. Her research has appeared in the American Journal of Political Science and State Politics and Policy Quarterly.

Jason A. Kirk is Associate Professor of political science at Elon University, North Carolina. His research and teaching interests are in comparative politics and international relations, with a focus on India and South Asia. He is the author of India and the World Bank: The Politics of Aid and Influence (2010).

Ashley Koning is assistant director of the Eagleton Center for Public Interest Polling and a PhD candidate in the political science department at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, with concentrations in American politics, women and politics, and methodology.

Christopher W. Larimer is Associate Professor of political science at the University of Northern Iowa. He is the coauthor of The Public Policy Theory Primer and The Public Administration Theory Primer (2nd ed.), and has authored or coauthored several articles that have appeared in political science journals, including American Political Science Review, Journal of Politics, and Political Behavior.

Robert J. McGrath is assistant professor in the School of Policy, Government, and International Affairs at George Mason University. He received his PhD in 2011 from the University of Iowa and was a Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Scholar in Health Policy Research at the University of Michigan from 2013–2015. His work focuses on how the structure and arrangement of democratic institutions affects the policymaking process and his research has recently appeared in Political Research Quarterly, Legislative Studies Quarterly, Public Administration Review, American Politics Research, and State Politics and Policy Quarterly.

David P. Redlawsk is Professor of political science and Director of the Eagleton Center for Public Interest Polling at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, New Jersey. He received his PhD from Rutgers, and holds an MBA from Vanderbilt and a BA from Duke. His recent books include The Positive Case for Negative Campaigning (2015), Why Iowa? How Caucuses and Sequential Elections Improve the Presidential Nominating Process (2011), How Voters Decide: Information Processing during an Election Campaign (2006), and Feeling Politics: Emotion in Political Information Processing (Palgrave Macmillan, 2006).

Jon C. Rogowski is assistant professor in the Department of Political Science at Washington University in St. Louis. His work focuses broadly on American politics, with specific research and teaching interests in electoral politics, Congress, and the presidency. He is a coauthor (with Will Howell and Saul Jackman) of The Wartime President (2013), which received the William H. Riker Award for Best Book in Political Economy in 2014. Other research has recently appeared in the American Journal of Political Science and Political Analysis. He received his PhD in political science in 2012 from the University of Chicago.

Brandon Rottinghaus is Associate Professor and the Senator Don Henderson Scholar at the University of Houston. His research interests include the presidency, executive-legislative relations, and public opinion. He is the author of The Provisional Pulpit: Modern Presidential Leadership of Public Opinion (2010) and a forthcoming book on executive scandal.

Josh M. Ryan is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Utah State University. He received his PhD from the University of Colorado in 2011. His work examines American institutions at the state and federal levels, specifically how bargaining within and across institutions produces policy outcomes and affects legislative productivity. His research has recently appeared in the Journal of Politics, Legislative Studies Quarterly, Political Research Quarterly, among others.

Trygve Throntveit is an independent scholar living in Minneapolis, Minnesota. He received his PhD in history from Harvard University. He has taught at Harvard and at Dartmouth College, where he was a fellow in US foreign policy and international security at the John Sloan Dickey Center. He is the author of William James and the Quest for an Ethical Republic (2014) and Power without Victory: Woodrow Wilson and the American Internationalist Experiment (forthcoming).

John Weingart is Associate Director of the Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers University and serves as Director of the Institute's Center on the American Governor. Before coming to Rutgers, he worked on environmental and land use issues in the administrations of four New Jersey governors. Since 1974, he has also been the host of Music You Can't Hear on the Radio, a weekly radio program on WPRB-FM and WPRB.com. His chapter here has grown from a lifelong affection for American folk music, bluegrass, and electoral politics.
