

Appendix 1: Sample Newspapers and Media Coverage

Sample Newspapers

The following newspapers are referred to throughout the monograph as the ‘sample newspapers’ that were collected over the six months data collection period (1 March 2010 to 31 August 2010).

Andersonstown News

Belfast Telegraph

Irish News

News Letter

North Belfast News

South Belfast News

Sunday Life

Sunday World, Northern Edition

In selecting the newspapers, the ideological differences existing within Northern Ireland’s media have been considered and the selection is representative (i.e. The Irish News aligns with the Nationalist viewpoint, whereas the Newsletter aligns with the Unionist viewpoint and the Belfast Telegraph appears not to favour or align with one specific cultural tradition or particular political ethos).

Table A1.1 Sample newspapers circulation figures, December 2010

Table A1.2 Other local newspapers cited

The following newspapers were collected during July and August 2010 and further news items were accessed from the online archives. Both newspapers provided a local insight into the PSNI's Operation Exposure in Derry/Londonderry.

Newspaper	Type	Circulation figure	Ownership
Derry Journal	Twice-weekly	15,848 (Tuesday) 18,182 (Friday)	Johnston Publishing (NI)
Londonderry Sentinel	Weekly	4,451	Johnston Publishing (NI)

Table A1.3 National and international print media

The following newspapers were accessed in hard copy and online during July and August 2010. The media content collected for analysis related to what was framed in media and political discourse as 'sectarian rioting' in Northern Ireland. The collection of national and international print media provided an interesting dynamic and insight into the reporting and representations of Northern Ireland's children, young people and the transition period.
