

Index

- Assessment
  - of self-rules, 199–202
  - of understanding, 199–202
- Awareness
  - is learning possible without, 246–251
  - through correlated hypothesizing, 246–248
- Bait-shy phenomenon, 280
- Behavior
  - motor, 331
  - observational, 332
  - taxonomy of, 330–335
  - verbal. See Verbal behavior
  - visceral, 331–332
- Behavior analytic theory
  - general characteristics of, 222–224, 226–238
- Behavioristic theories
  - cognitive criticisms of, 243–246
  - compared to cognitive theories, 221–226
- Causality, 299–301, 332–333
  - and behavior–behavior relations, 372–373
- Chaining, 277–278
- Cognitive theories
  - assumptions of, 239
  - compared to behavioristic theories, 221–226, 257–260
  - description of, 5–21, 225–226, 238–246
  - evaluation of, 22–27
  - types of, 239–241
- Combinatorial mutual entailment, 169–170
- Commitment, 382–383. See also Public commitment
- Comprehensive Distancing, 372–384
- Conformity
  - and excessive rule-following, 361–362
- Contiguity
  - requirement for, 244–246
- Contingencies
  - knowledge of, 271
  - not direct acting, 270
    - effects of rules on, 289–315
    - how they control behavior, 307–315
  - See also* Schedule performance
- Correlated hypotheses, 246–248, 251–257
  - comparison to functional operants, 251–257
  - and verbal behavior, 255–257
- Counterpliance, 211
- Delayed outcomes. See Outcomes, delayed;
Temporal relations
- Development
  - relevance to rule-governance, 111–112
- Emotional acceptance, 381–382
- Environmental restructuring, 315–316
- Establishing operations, 291–292
  - and rules, 206–208
- Extended psychological present. See Psychological present
- Functional analytic psychotherapy, 366–372
- Goal-setting
  - public, 317–318. See also Public commitment
- History
  - of the individual, 327–330
  - of theories of rule-governance, 97–114
- Hypotheses
  - about contingencies, 124–129
  - about performance, 124–129
  - and rules, 255–257, 260–261

- Inference
 nature of, 44–48
 role of theory in, 48
- Information processing, 5–6
 view of cognitive activities, 6–9
- Information processing models
 evaluation of, 22–27
 Level I, 10–11
 Level II, 11–13
 production systems, 13–21
- Information processing theories, 239–241
- Information theory, 85
- Instructional control. See Rule-governance
- Instructions. See Rules
- Knowing how versus knowing that, 32–33, 236
- Knowing that versus knowing how, 32–33, 236
- Law of effect, 275–276
 correlation-based, 275–276
- Learning traditions
 animal versus human, ix
- Listener
 analysis of difficulty of, 155–160
 behavior of, 85–96
 effects on
 by advising, 89–90
 by agreement, 94–95
 by laws, 92
 by laws of science, 92–93
 by reading, 93–94
 by rule-direction, 90–92
 by teaching, 89
 by telling, 87–89
 by thinking, 95–96
 and speaker
 as same person, 95–96
- Listening
 and understanding, 178–179
- Literality, 373–374
- Machines
 thinking, 23–24
- Meaning
 speaking with, 177–178
- Mentalism, 48–49
- Motivational operations
 and rules, 206–208, 291–292
- Mutual entailment, 168
- Operants
 descriptive, 230
 functional, 230–231
 comparison to correlated hypotheses, 251–257
 verbal, 86–87
- Outcome expectations, 348
- Outcomes
 cumulating, 286–289
 delayed, 270–283
 ineffectiveness of, 271
 improbable, 283–286
- Pliance, 203–206
 versus counterpliance, 211
 versus tracking, 209–215
- Phys. See Pliance
- Private events, 42–44, 330–335
 as causes, 299–301
 measurement of, 199–202
 role in natural science, 299–301
- Production systems, 13–21
 characteristics of, 13–15
 reasons for preferring, 15–19
- Psychological present, 186–187, 246
 and verbal stimuli, 186–187
- Psychotherapy. See Therapy
- Public commitment, 211–215
 and self-reinforcement, 295–297
- Rational Emotive Therapy, 341–347
 deficits in, 346
- Reason-giving, 374
- Reference, 155, 177–178
 etymology of, 178
- Relation
 etymology of, 178
- Relational frames
 defining characteristics of, 168–173
 evidence for, 176–177
 stimulus equivalence as a special case of, 173–174
 types of comparison, 173
 coordination, 172
 distinction, 172–173
 opposition, 172
 verbal control of, 173
- Relational responding combinatorial entailment, 169–170
 definition of, 168–171
 evidence for, 176–177

- Relational responding (Cont.)
 hypothesized history giving rise to, 167
 mutual entailment, 168
 transfer of functions, 170
- Relations
 arbitrarily applicable, 167–175
 behavior–behavior, 372–373
 closed-loop, 227–228
 discriminative, 233
 nonarbitrary, 167
 nonarbitrary participating with arbitrary, 174–175
 open-loop, 228–232
- Rule. See Rules
- Rule-control
 therapeutic avoidance of, 362–372
 types of problems in, 359–362
See also Rule-governance
- Rule-following, 180–182, 202–214
 and conformity, 361–362
 excessive, 361–362
 functional units of, 203–214
 likelihood of, 309–315
See also Rule-governance
- Rule-formulation problems in, 359–360
- Rule-governance
 awareness of, 51–53
 behavioral versus cognitive theories of, 3– 74, 104–107, 237–246
 clinical implications of, 325–384
 criteria for inferring, 50–65
 dangers in the literature, 215–217 developmental study of, 111–112
 examples of behavioral experimentation in, 124–146, 192–197
 factors that make it more likely, 309–315
 and Functional Analytic Psychotherapy, 370–372
 future of research on, 217
 generalized, 303–304
 history of behavioral experimentation in, 107–113
 history of behavioral theories of, 97–114 importance of consequences in, 306 importance of self-reinforcement to, 305– 306 inference of, 41–73
 and irrational beliefs, 343–344
 and non-direct acting contingencies, 289– 315 practical significance of, 103–104, 325–384
- Rule-governance (Cont.)
 relation of verbal behavior to, 100–103, 158–160
 self-rules, 342–343
 and stimulus equivalence, 112–113
 study through schedule sensitivity, 108–111, 124–146
 versus contingency-shaping, 38–41, 120– 124, 153, 191–198
 applied implications of, 362–366
- Rule use
 awareness of, 51–53
 criteria for inferring, 50–65
See also Rule-governance
- Rules
 as causes, 34–41
 cognitive view of, 242–243
 confirmation of, 307–308
 construction of, 66–73
 as cues, 290–291
 definition of, 237–238, 273, 335–337
 dictionary definition of, 153–154
 disconfirmation, 312–315
 as dispositions, 29
 and dual contingencies, 238
 as establishing operations, 206–208, 291– 292
 etymology of, 153–154
 failure to follow, 360–361
 as guides, 29
 how they control behavior, 289–302
 how to change, 344–345
 and hypotheses, 255–257, 260–261 importance of stating, 308–309
 information processing approach, 4–22 instructed versus shaped, 124–146
 and knowing, 32–34
 as listener units of activities, 208–209
 locus of, 36–37
 as motivating operations, 206–208, 291– 292 normative versus normal, 27–28, 31
 self, 339–341
 and self-consequences, 292–301
 sets as, 68–71
 specific, 302
 types of augmenting, 206–208
 comparison between pliance and tracking, 209–215
 normal versus normative, 27–28
 pliance, 203–206, 291, 336

- Rules (Cont.)
 types of (Cont.)
   self-pliance, 340
   self-tracking, 340
 understanding of, 179–180
 versus regularities, 28–29
 why obey them, 35–36, 202–215
- Schedule insensitivity. See Schedule sensitivity
- Schedule performance
 effects on
   by accurate performance instructions, 130–135
   by inaccurate performance instructions, 135–137
   by instructing schedule discriminations, 138–146
   by instructions, 130–135
   by shaped contingency descriptions, 124–129, 130–134
   by shaped guesses, 124–129
   by shaped performance descriptions, 124–129
 relation to rule-governance, 108–111, 124–146, 195–197
- Schedule sensitivity, 215–216
 relation to rule-governance, 108–111, 124–146, 195–197
- Self-awareness
 behavior analytic view of, 235–237
- Self-efficacy theory, 347–354
- Self-evaluation, 350
 importance to rule control, 304–305
- Self-identity
 and verbal behavior, 378–381
- Self-observation, 349
- Self-regulation, 349–350
- Self-reinforcement, 350
 arguments against, 295–301
 importance to rule control, 305–306
 ineffectiveness of, 295–298
 and public commitment, 295–297, 317–318
- Self-rules
 contextual control over control by, 373–374 difficulties in formulating, 359–360
- Sets
 cognitive, 68–69
 discrimination learning, 69–71
 perceptual, 68
- Silent Dog strategy, 200–202
- Social influence
 and verbal stimuli, 185–186
- Social skills training, 362–366
- Social standard setting, 211–215
- Speaker
 and listener
   as same person, 95–96
- Speaking
 and meaning, 177–178
- Stimulus equivalence, 162–166
 definition of, 163
 and nonhumans, 163–166
 relation to rule-governance, 112–113
 as a special case of relational responding, 173–174 theories of, 164–166
- Stimulus functions
 versus stimulus objects, 216–217
- Stimulus–response learning theories invalid criticisms of, 15–18
- Temporal relations
 and verbal stimuli, 185, 270–283
- Theoretical models
 behavioral versus cognitive, 221–226
 mediational versus nonmediational, 221–226
- Therapy
 cognitive, 341–346
 Comprehensive Distancing, 372–384
 Functional Analytic, 366–372
 Rational Emotive, 341–346
 social skills, 362–366
- Thoughts
 as behavior, 372–373
- Tracking, 206
 versus pliance, 209–215
- Turing machine, 23–24
- Unconsciousness
 cognitive view of, 241–242
- Understanding, 198–202
 assessment by the Silent Dog strategy, 200–202 assessment by transfer of control, 200 assessment by verbal networks, 199–200
 how it can be assessed, 199–202
 listening with, 178–179
- Verbal behavior and bidirectionality, 162
 characteristics of, 162
 and conventionality, 162
 definition of, 182

- Verbal behavior (Cont.)
  - and ineffectuality, 162
  - problems in the analysis of
    - contextual control, 157
    - functional units, 156
    - lure of structure, 158
    - measuring strength, 150
  - relation to rule-governance, 158–160
  - Skinner's analysis of, 154–155
    - problems with, 155–158
  - as speaker behavior, 154–155
- Verbal conditioning
  - and awareness, 246–251
- Verbal control
  - as discriminative control, 197–198
  - as self-control, 198
  - See also* Rule-governance
- Verbal descriptions
  - of contingencies, 122–124
- Verbal descriptions (Cont.)
  - of performance, 122–124
- Verbal functions
  - definition of, 175–176
  - of nonverbal environment, 181
- Verbal stimulation
  - special characteristics of
    - expansion of psychological present, 186–187
    - expansion of social influence, 185–186
    - expansion of temporal relations, 185
    - indirectness of functions, 183–184
    - specificity of functions, 184–185
- Verbal stimuli
  - definition of, 160–177
  - as discriminative stimuli, 197–198
  - as products of verbal behavior, 160–161
  - relational account of, 166–177
  - as symbols, 161