

Appendix: Patrick's TV Appearances Since 1956

The table below attempts to list the majority of Patrick's main TV and Radio appearances from 1956 until his death in 2012. I have deliberately not attempted to individually list the 722 Sky at Night appearances that he made during that time, as that alone would take up a dozen pages! I have not included tribute programmes broadcast after his death either. I have also kept each appearance or series to one line for the same reason. The list is approximately chronological but, for example, I have lumped Patrick's four 'Seeing Stars' children's astro series (1957–1961) together, rather than separate them with the half-dozen other minor appearances Patrick made from 1957 to 1961, outside of the Sky at Night.

Much information has had to be left out or abbreviated. For example, the guest lists in the numerous quiz shows he took part in (such as Blankety-Blank etc.) only list a couple of extra guests in my final data row. Most older readers will understand the Channel abbreviations already, but 'Light'=BBC Light Programme, 'Home'=BBC Home Service, 'Choice'=BBC Choice and Netw'k 3=BBC Network 3. In 1967 the BBC Light Programme became Radio 1 & 2. In 1970 the BBC Third Programme/Network 3 became Radio 3 and the Home Service became Radio 4. BBC Choice (1998–2003) was the first BBC digital TV channel but later split up into BBC 3, CBBC & CBeebies.

The table has been compiled from various sources including the author's own scrap books, newspaper listings and the Radio Times. I have not included repeats, just the original showing. Patrick often appeared as a brief guest in children's TV shows without being listed in the schedules, so many brief appearances are absent from the list. From the 1950s to the 1990s he also appeared on numerous BBC TV news summaries as well. I have not even attempted to list all of those! Where there were a long series of weekly programmes, all involving Patrick, I have lumped them into one line with the appearance figure in parentheses, e.g. (18), indicating just how many episodes there were which featured Patrick. For example, from 1972 to 1975

Patrick appeared on every edition of Radio 4's 'Fair Deal' hosted by David Nixon, with the other guests being June Whitfield and Willie Rushton (illustrator of his 'Bureaucrats book'). In 1983 the format was revived with Paul Daniels in charge (Dealing with Daniels) and Patrick was an almost permanent guest on that show for the next 6 years and, in fact, the only survivor from Nixon's show. The other guests on that show were selected from John Junkin, Anneka Rice, Duggie Brown, Sarah Greene, Barry Cryer, Lorraine Chase and Matthew Kelly. Those others were pro. entertainers & comedians, but Patrick was an entertainer and an astronomer who was just as happy on science programmes. I have adopted the same one line per series system for the Radio 2 show 'Treble Chance Quiz' where Patrick was a permanent Team Captain from 1972 to 1980. Likewise the Channel 4 GamesMaster series where Patrick's caricatured face and voice appeared on 126 episodes, but I have only tabulated each of the seven series individually. After the last ever GamesMaster programme, broadcast in February 1998, Patrick was shown in his real human form, in a video released by Future Publishing (the GamesMaster magazine publishers). He was seen leaving a large office building, getting into a red London taxi cab waiting at the kerb, and waving a final goodbye through the cab window!

During the Apollo Moon missions from 1968 to 1972 (Apollo's 8-17, excluding Apollo 9 which was an Earth orbit rehearsal mission) Patrick was on BBC TV every day for a week or more. I have listed his appearances as one row per mission, even though there were numerous TV appearances of Patrick in the Apollo Studio, or on the BBC News, or on children's TV.

In the case of right wing Patrick's 14 appearances on the political forum 'Any Questions?' I have listed them all individually. From 1970 to 1983 he appeared semi-regularly on the panel, chaired by David Jacobs, arguing with left wingers such as Vic Feather and others. However, he was then banned for 16 years after a politically correct female MP scolded Patrick that immigrants were as British as she was, and as he was. Patrick explained to her that 'if a cat has kittens in a pigsty, they don't turn into piglets!' That was the end of that 13 year run! Patrick also made at least 10 documented appearances on 'Just a Minute', chaired by Nicholas Parsons, from 1975 to 1980, and at least 13 appearances on the BBC quiz 'Face the Music' between 1972 and 1981. I have listed these individually too. The same applies to his 15 Blankety-Blank appearances between 1979 and 1984. I do not claim this is in any way an exhaustive list, but I think it covers most of the major TV appearances Patrick made, apart from those 722 Sky at Night's of course, which I've covered with a single line at the start.
