

Authors

Bernt, Matthias (Dr. phil.) is a political scientist and works at the Leibniz Institute for Research on Society and Space (IRS) in Erkner, Germany. His research focus is on urban development, urban governance and gentrification.

Betancourt, Camilo (M.A.) works in Berlin as a journalist and musician.

Döring, Christian (M.A.) completed the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University Berlin in 2015. Since early 2015 he has worked as a market analyst at ZIEGERT Bank & Real Estate Consulting, where the focus of his work lies in location and market analysis for housing projects.

Ertelt, Greta (M.A.) completed the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University Berlin in 2015. She now works on urban and regional development in her role as project manager at EBP Deutschland in Berlin.

Förste, Daniel (Diploma in Social Science) studied Urban Sociology and worked between 2011–2015 as research associate at the Leibniz Institute for Research on Society and Space (IRS) in Erkner, Germany. He currently works for the Institut für Stadtforschung und Strukturpolitik in Berlin. His research interests are urban studies and housing policy.

Grotendorf, Nelly (M.A.) studied Human Geography (Masters program “Geography of Urbanization”, Humboldt University of Berlin) and works as a consultant for international trade policy at the German NGO Forum on Environment and Development in Berlin.

Heidsieck, Lisa (M.A.) completed the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin in 2014. Since then she has been working at CIMA Beratung + Management in Lübeck, Germany, where her focus is on urban development, city marketing and tourism.

Helbrecht, Ilse (Prof. Dr. phil.) holds the professorship of the Cultural and Social Geography Department at the Humboldt University of Berlin, and is also director of the Georg Simmel Center for Metropolitan Studies (GSZ) in Berlin. Her research focus is on urban governance, urban development and housing markets.

Holm, Andrej (Dr. phil.) is a social scientist and staff member of the department for Urban and Regional Sociology at the Humboldt University of Berlin. The focus of his work is gentrification and housing policy.

Jacobsen, Malve (M.A.) studied Asian/African Studies and Urban Sociology at the Humboldt University of Berlin. Since 2015 she has been a PhD candidate, working on global circulation and materialization of transport policy at the Human Geography department of the Goethe University Frankfurt.

Koch, Simon (M.A.) completed the Master program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin in 2015. Since then he has worked as project developer at Laupi where his professional focus is on location analysis and garden properties.

Kohlsdorf, Tanja (B.A.) studied on the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin.

Kortus, Marrike (M.A.) completed the degree program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin in 2014. Since then she has been employee of a real estate company and focuses on location analysis and housing in Berlin.

Neupert, Paul (M.A.) completed the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin in 2015. He is currently a junior policy officer at the National Federation of the Homeless in Berlin.

Schramm, Stephanie (M.A.) completed the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin in 2014. Since 2017 she has been working for the consulting company bulwengesa in Frankfurt am Main.

Schulz, Carlotta-Elena (M.A.) completed the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin in 2015. Her professional interests lie in social justice, social engagement and innovative solutions in the social impact sector. She has been manager for the non-profit organization Librileo in Berlin since September 2016, promoting early childhood education on a regional scale.

Schulz, Guido studied economics (B.Sc.), Social and Political Thought (M.A.) and statistics (M.Sc.). Since 2014 has been researching on the topic of gentrification and displacement in Berlin.

Stegner, Christine (M.A.) completed the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin in the summer of 2014. Since 2015 she has been an employee of TERRAGON Projekt in Berlin where she focuses on project development of retirement and care homes.

Thieme, Georg (M.A.) completed the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin in 2015. He currently works as project manager at die raumplaner, an urban and regional planning office in Berlin. His professional focus is on citizen participation and networking, specifically for high streets, inner-city development, and integrated planning.

Uhlig, Christiane (B.Sc. Human Geography/Sociology) works as consultant for the missing persons office of the German Red Cross in Berlin.

Ulbricht, Klaus (Dr. rer. nat), is a certified chemist and between 1992–2006 was district mayor of Treptow-Köpenick in Berlin. In order to pursue his interest in urban development he enrolled as guest student in the Geography Department at the Humboldt University of Berlin. He is currently chairman of the management board of the Bürgerstiftung Treptow-Köpenick, Berlin.

Wegener, Lina (M.A.) completed the Masters program “Geography of Urbanization” at the Humboldt University of Berlin, and since 2015 has been research assistant at the consulting company bulwiengesa. Professionally her interests lie in location and investment analysis for industrial properties in Berlin, Hamburg, Dresden and Leipzig. Her focus is on current trends in the office property market, such as changing demands catalyzed by digitalization (start-ups), and the establishment of new office locations in Berlin.