ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We are very grateful to Chandra Talpade Mohanty, not only for encouraging us to take on this project, but also for her brilliant intellectual companionship throughout the process of bringing the book to press. Chandra's friendship and our shared homespace continue to support and inspire us in every way.

We thank all of our antiracist feminist friends and colleagues who are always willing to think through difficult theoretical and political issues with us. We want to give special thanks to Margo Okazawa-Rey for her pedagogical mentoring, to Gwyneth Kirk for her abiding interest in the project, and to Tamara R. Williams for her insightful and enthusiastic comments on earlier drafts of our work. We are deeply appreciative to Satya P. Mohanty for his generosity of spirit in giving us his challenging and rigorous commentary on our introductory essay. We also want to acknowledge Ilia O. Edwards-Vargas and thank her for many stimulating conversations about pedagogical theory and practice. We recognize and thank our colleagues in the Women's Studies Program, Thematic Studies Program, and Philosophy Department at John Jay College and the Departments of Spanish and Women's Studies at Hamilton College for feminist intellectual sustenance and for opening an academic space to teach our radical courses. Amie extends special thanks to the philosophers Enrique Chávez-Arviso, MaryAnn McClure, and John Pittman, for their interest in and enduring support for the project. Susan thanks Nancy Rabinowitz for her initiative and leadership in constructing feminist institutional "spaces" that nurture antiracist, feminist teachers and scholars at Hamilton College.

We have benefited enormously from audience comments and questions at panels where selections of this work were presented, including those sponsored by the Radical Philosophy Association Meetings at San Francisco State University in 1999, the Dean of Graduate Studies at John Jay College in 2000, the Women's Studies Program at John Jay College in 2000, the Kirkland Project for the Study of Gender, Culture, and Society at Hamilton College in 2001, and the Peace Studies Regional Conference at Hamilton College in 2001.

For generous research funding, we acknowledge and thank the Office of the Dean of Faculty at Hamilton College and the Professional Staff Congress of the City University of New York.

We want to express our gratitude to Elenitsa Weld of Hamilton College, for her diligent editorial assistance and preparation of several drafts of the manuscript. We are indebted to Kristi Long, Roe Raz, and Meg Weaver at Palgrave Macmillan for their commitment to the book.

For his innovative and relentless technical support, we extend our thanks and appreciation to Craig Kollegger.

To our contributors and to our students we give our deepest gratitude, for sharing with us the project of reaching for innovation in antiracist feminist teaching and learning.

Amie thanks her husband Gur Melamede for his passionate enthusiasm for the project and for his spectacular dedication to their family; both have been crucial to the completion of this book. Amie is grateful to her son Ishai and to the Macdonald and Melamede families, for everything they are.

Susan thanks her husband Craig Kollegger for working hard to keep the home fires burning and for his willingness to listen to endless brainstorming and problem-solving during the production of this volume. Susan gives special thanks to her sons Ryan, Colin, and Max Fernando, and to the entire Sánchez family, for their colorful love and support.

Finally, Amie and Susan thank each other for our shared dedication to depth, honesty, and love as devoted friends of heart and mind.
