This book is the result of a research project entitled 'Globalization in South Asia: Its Impact on Employment and Labour Issues'. The project was conducted through the Institute of Developing Economies (IDE-JETRO) between 2005/6 and 2006/7. During the course of these two years, researchers benefited from the unlimited help of numerous people and organizations, both in Japan and in South Asia. Though every individual cannot be cited, we are very grateful to all who provided their assistance.

The overall two-year project included four overseas joint research projects in India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka. Smooth coordination of these efforts would have been impossible without the efficient and considerate administrative support provided by Kumiko Sakumoto and Kyoko Miura at IDE-JETRO.

As our research project neared completion, it was the timely support and arrangements made by Masahiro Okada at IDE-JETRO and Alec Dubber at Palgrave Macmillan that led to publication of the results of this research in its current form. Mami Ishigaki and Noriko Wakabayashi at IDE-JETRO took much trouble to arrange the editing of English in the manuscripts. We would like to thank them and also the English editors who spent substantial time and effort not only in correcting sentences but also clarifying our ideas.

We certainly appreciate the invaluable comments given by anonymous referees both inside and outside IDE-JETRO. Although their suggestions have been incorporated where possible, contributing authors are, of course, responsible for remaining errors and any shortcomings. Comments on this book will be most welcome, and we hope that both the book and subsequent discussion will lead to further research with an even wider group of people in the future.

Notes on the Contributors

Etsuyo Arai is a Research Fellow at IDE-JETRO. She has done postgraduate work at Peradeniya University, and her current research interests include economic and social transformation in Sri Lanka. She is the author of 'Sri Lanka: Community Consultants in an Underdeveloped Welfare State' (in Shinichi Shigetomi (ed.), The State and NGOs: Perspective from Asia, Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, 2002).

Junko Kiso is currently Professor in the Faculty of Global and Inter-Cultural Studies at Ferris University in Japan. She has been a visiting scholar at Jawaharlal Nehru University in India, and her main areas of interest are in development and labour studies in South Asia. She has contributed to scholarship in these areas with extensive publications and is author of Labour in Indian Development: Structure and Changes in Urban Labour Market (2003, in Japanese).

Momoe Makino is a Research Fellow at IDE-JETRO. Her current research interest concerns how the creation of employment has been used to alleviate poverty in South Asia. She is the author of 'Pakistan Labor-Intensive Industry Struggling against Chinese Products: a Case of Footwear Industry' (in Ajia Keizai, Vol. 47, No. 6, in Japanese).

Arup Mitra is Professor of Economics at the Institute of Economic Growth, Delhi. His research interests are in issues relating to urban development, labour and welfare, industrial growth and productivity, and gender differentials. His earlier works include Occupational Choices, Networks and Transfers: an Exegesis Based on Micro Data from Delhi Slums (2003) and Urban Development and Urban Ills (with Edwin S. Mills, 1997). Professor Mitra was the winner of the prestigious Mahalanobis Memorial Medal in 2004.

Mayumi Murayama is a Senior Research Fellow at IDE-JETRO. Her main areas of interest include gender and development issues in South Asia and Japan, and regional relationships in South Asia. Recent publications include Gender and Development: Japanese Experience in Comparative Perspective (editor, 2005) and 'Borders, Migration and Sub-Regional Cooperation in Eastern South Asia' (in Economic and Political Weekly, Vol. 41, No. 14, 2006).

Hisaya Oda is a Senior Research Fellow at IDE-JETRO and visiting Professor in the Graduate School of Tokyo University of Foreign Studies. He also serves on the editorial boards of Developing Economies, Ajia Keizai and the Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences. His research interests include the economic growth of Pakistan and migration issues in South Asia. He is the author of a number of research papers, and his recent article 'Dynamics of Internal and International Migration in Rural Pakistan: Evidence of Development and Underdevelopment' appears in Asian Population Studies (August, 2007).

Hitoshi Ota is a Research Fellow at IDE-JETRO. He specializes in labour economics, industrial relations and human resource management. His published work includes the article 'Flexible Work Organisation, Human Resource Practices and Worker Perception in India: a Case Study of Bangalore City' (in Indian Journal of Labour Economics, Vol. 48, No. 1, 2005).

Hiroshi Sato is former Director of the Area Studies Department at IDE. His research interest is in the current politics and political history of South Asia. Earlier works include Uneasy Federation. The Political Economy of Central Budgetary Transfers in South Asia (1994) and 'Social Security and Well-Being in a Low-Income Economy: an Appraisal of the Kerala Experience' (in The Developing Economies, Vol. 42, No. 2, 2004).

Takahiro Sato is an Associate Professor in the Research Institute for Economics and Business Administration at Kobe University. He was a visiting scholar at the University of California, Berkeley, and his main area of interest relates to economic development issues in India. He is the author of Development Economics: India's Economic Reforms in the era of Globalization (2002, in Japanese).

Yoshie Shimane is a Research Fellow at IDE-JETRO. She is currently a scholar affiliated with the Institute of Economic Growth in India, and her research interest lies in industrial development in India, especially in the accumulation of technology and its spillover into indigenous firms. Her earlier works include 'How Inter-Firm Linkage Enhanced the Growth of the Automobile Industry in India' (in Ajia Keizai, Vol. 40, No. 8, in Japanese) and 'India's Motorcycle Industry: Indigenous Two-Wheeler Manufacturers and the Development of Capability among Indian Components Suppliers' (in Yuri Sato and Moriki Ohara (eds), Asia's Motorcycle Industry: the Rise of Local Companies and the Dynamism of Industrial Development, 2006, in Japanese).

Yuko Tsujita is a Research Fellow at IDE-JETRO. Her major research interests include the social sector, labour, and urban development in India. She is currently completing her Ph.D. at the University of Sussex, and her dissertation is entitled 'The Impact of Education on the Poverty of Urban Slum Dwellers in Delhi, India'.
