Palgrave Studies in Nineteenth-Century Writing and Culture is a new monograph series that aims to represent the most innovative research on literary works that were produced in the English-speaking world from the time of the Napoleonic Wars to the fin de siècle. Attentive to the historical continuities between 'Romantic' and 'Victorian', the series will feature studies that help scholarship to reassess the meaning of these terms during a century marked by diverse cultural, literary, and political movements. The main aim of the series is to look at the increasing influence of types of historicism on our understanding of literary forms and genres. It reflects the shift from critical theory to cultural history that has affected not only the period 1800–1900 but also every field within the discipline of English literature. All titles in the series seek to offer fresh critical perspectives and challenging readings of both canonical and non-canonical writings of this era.

This book would not have been possible without the support of numerous individuals and organizations. Generous research and travel grants from UCLA, Duke University, and the University of South Carolina have enabled me to access crucial documents in far-flung locations and spend time writing up my findings. A short-term research grant from the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) allowed me to work on materials at the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Munich's Stadtarchiv, and the Monacensia Literaturarchiv. To the latter institution I am particularly indebted for allowing me to work on the original manuscript of Thomas Mann's play Fiorenza. My thanks are due, too, to the British Library and to Oxford University's Bodleian Library for access to unpublished materials by Katherine Harris Bradley and Edith Emma Cooper (Michael Field). The Lilly Library at the University of Indiana, Bloomington, holds many of Vita Sackville-West's letters and diaries, and was most helpful in letting me examine these materials. Similarly, librarians in Rare Books and Special Collections at Princeton University Library cheerfully facilitated my work on manuscripts by Oscar Wilde in the Robert H. Taylor Collection. I am grateful to Joseph Donohue and the late Nigel Nicolson for helping me locate obscure manuscripts that proved very important to my research. But I am perhaps most deeply indebted to the archivists and librarians at the William Andrews Clark Memorial Library at UCLA for the use of materials in their unrivalled 'Oscar Wilde and the 1890s' collection. The knowledge, enthusiasm, and generosity of the Clark team makes working on Wilde a real joy.

A shortened version of Chapter 2 appeared as 'The Urning and His Own: Individualism and the Fin-de-Siècle Invert', German Studies Review 26:2 (2003): 333–52. It is reprinted here with the kind permission of the German Studies Association. Chapter 3 was published in an earlier, shorter form as 'Wilde's Renaissance: Poison, Passion, and Personality', Victorian Literature and Culture 35:2 (2007), 517–36, and is reprinted with the kind permission of Cambridge University Press. Hans Thoma's 'Wandfries aus dem Musiksaal des Hauses Pringsheim' is reproduced courtesy of the Stuttgarter Staatsgalerie.

Without the extraordinary patience and intellectual rigor of Joseph Bristow and James A. Schultz this book would not have been written. I am deeply indebted to both of them. My thanks are due, too, to the many friends, colleagues, and scholars who shared ideas, feedback, and encouragement with me over the years, including Ehrhard Bahr, Eva Geulen, Andrew Hewitt, Anna Kuhn, Alice Kuzniar, Helmut Puff, Elise Mueller, Eva-Maria Russo, Julia Offen, James Rolleston, Ann Marie Rasmussen, Barbara Mennel, Hugh M. Ridley, Inge Walther, and especially Peter McIsaac and Lisa Parkes. Feedback from the reviewers and editors at German Studies Review, Victorian Literature and Culture, and Palgrave Macmillan has proved invaluable. Prisca Augustyn, Elisa Hermann, and Sean Ketchem provided help with Italian and Latin translations. My colleagues in the Department of Languages, Literatures, and Cultures at the University of South Carolina have been very generous in providing the professional and personal support that allowed me to finish this book: my thanks to them.

Finally, without my family I would not even have started on this project. Jennifer Pournelle's support has never flagged, and pushed me past the most difficult phases of writing (and sometimes precisely not writing). But were it not for the book-rich, loving, supportive environment with which my parents and siblings surrounded me while growing up, the very idea of embarking on such a project might never have even occurred to me. It is to them, in thanks, that I dedicate this book.
