J. M. Coetzee

J. M. Coetzee
Countervoices

Carrol Clarkson

palgrave macmillan

© Carrol Clarkson 2009

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2009 978-0-230-22156-7

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No portion of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, Saffron House, 6-10 Kirby Street, London EC1N 8TS.

Any person who does any unauthorized act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted her right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

First published 2009 by
PALGRAVE MACMILLAN

Palgrave Macmillan in the UK is an imprint of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan in the US is a division of St Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-30707-4 ISBN 978-0-230-24544-0 (eBook)

DOI 10.1057/9780230245440

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources. Logging, pulping and manufacturing processes are expected to conform to the environmental regulations of the country of origin.

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

A catalog record for this book is available from the Library of Congress.

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1
18 17 16 15 14 13 12 11 10 09

Transferred to Digital Printing in 2011

For Jacques Berthoud

Contents

Acknowledgements	viii
Introduction	1
1 Not I	19
2 You	47
3 Voice	75
4 Voiceless	106
5 Names	133
6 Etymologies	153
7 Conclusion: We	176
Notes	194
Bibliography	212
Index	221

Acknowledgements

Jacques Berthoud (to whom this book is dedicated) supervised my doctoral thesis on Charles Dickens at the University of York. It is to Jacques that I am indebted for developing a way of writing about literature.

In relation to the present project, my first and ongoing thanks go to David Attwell. His extraordinary intellectual generosity and verve have resulted in my writing a much better book than the one I'd initially proposed.

Two conferences have played a vital role in my work on Coetzee: the colloquium organized by Mark Sanders and Nancy Ruttenberg at New York University in March 2007, and the conference organized by Lucy Allais of the philosophy department at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg in March 2009. I've benefited immensely from papers presented at these conferences, and from conversations with the other participants. Thank you to Jakob Lothe, who invited me to be the co-supervisor of Kjetil Enstad's doctoral thesis, and to give postgraduate classes on Coetzee at the University of Oslo in February 2008; it's during my preparation for the Oslo visit that I refined important parts of my thinking.

Thank you to the Coetzee student-scholars (both visiting and resident) at the University of Cape Town. Their intellectual energy and enthusiasm is at the core of our discussion group, the Coetzee Collective, which in turn provided me with the motivation to write this book. I would especially like to mention Kjetil Enstad, Donald Powers, Arthur Rose, Karen Jennings and Lance Herman. Sue Buchanan (who compiled the index) has been a sustained source of encouragement throughout the project. My sincere thanks also go out to my colleagues at UCT and to the visiting speakers who have supported and participated in our Coetzee Collective meetings. Lyn Holness and John De Gruchy of UCT's Research and Innovation Centre have given me invaluable practical advice and support – not least when I first set out on this project.

Several people have read my essays and reviews (sometimes even before I myself knew that I'd be writing a book), and earlier drafts of chapters. I've gained a great deal, in different ways, from exchanges with Peter Fitzpatrick, Drucilla Cornell, Derek Attridge, Raj Mesthrie, Mark Sanders, Andrew van der Vlies, Bernhard Weiss, Elisa Galgut, Mike Marais and Gail Fincham. I've gained more than it is possible to say, and more than I myself probably realize, from nearly two decades of conversation with my husband, Stephen Clarkson, who reads my work with challenging and inspiring philosophical insight.

A big thank you to Jacob and Christopher: like Elizabeth Costello's two children, they've been left to their own devices more often than I feel pleased to admit, but unlike Helen and John, they've never resorted to making 'tiny whining sounds' at my door while I'm trying to write.

The image on the cover is a detail from the Book of Speaking in Tongues (ink and gold on bone) by Pippa Skotnes. Thank you, Pippa, for permission to use this image, and for taking such an engaged interest in the book.

Chapter 2, 'You', has its beginnings in a review essay, 'Derek Attridge in the Event', Journal of Literary Studies 21.3/4 (December 2005) 379–386.

Chapter 4, 'Voiceless', is based on an article, "'Done because we are too menny": Ethics and Identity in J.M. Coetzee's Disgrace', Current Writing 15.2 (October 2003) 77–90.

An earlier version of Chapter 5, 'Names', appears as an essay in a book: 'Remains of the Name', Literary Landscapes from Modernism to Postcolonialism. Eds. A. de Lange, G. Fincham, J. Lothe and J. Hawthorn (Palgrave, 2008), pp. 125–42.