Series Editors: Dr Bill Bell (Centre for the History of the Book, University of Edinburgh), Dr Chandrika Kaul (Department of Modern History, University of St Andrews), Professor Kenneth Osgood (Department of History, Florida Atlantic University), Dr Alexander S. Wilkinson (Centre for the History of the Media, University College Dublin)

Palgrave Studies in the History of the Media publishes original, high-quality research into the cultures of communication from the middle ages to the present day. The series explores the variety of subjects and disciplinary approaches that characterize this vibrant field of enquiry. The series will help shape current interpretations not only of the media, in all its forms, but also of the powerful relationship between the media and politics, society, and the economy.

Advisory Board: Professor Carlos Barrera (University of Navarra, Spain), Professor Peter Burke (Emmanuel College, Cambridge), Professor Denis Cryle (Central Queensland University, Australia), Professor David Culbert (Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge), Professor Nicholas Cull (Center on Public Diplomacy, University of Southern California), Professor Tom O'Malley (Centre for Media History, University of Wales, Aberystwyth), Professor Chester Pach (Ohio University)

West Germans against the West : anti-Americanism in media and public opinion in the Federal Republic of Germany / Christoph Hendrik Müller.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

Summary: "An exploration of how the theme of Anti-Americanism was employed by influential sections of the West German media to oppose the modernisation of the Federal Republic of Germany during the long 1950s. In the public battle over the future direction of Germany, America stood as a symbol of social, political and economic corruption"—Provided by publisher.

Acknowledgements

There are a number of people and institutions without whose support this monograph would have been impossible to write. First of all, there are those who provided me with accommodation and other assistance during the many research trips I made to Germany and the USA. I would like to thank Marc Gawron (Bonn), Andreas 'Harry' Fuchs (Munich), Verena Hanf (Essen), Olliver Groß and Andrea Herdegen (Bonn), Wolfgang Büchner, Anneke Hoppensack, Antonie Nord, and Björn Jettka (Hamburg), Ute Würtz and Hans Kania (Dortmund), Ben Walsh (San Francisco), Ciaran Power and Nicole Harper (Stanford/California), and Christine Haughney (New York). Some of them have moved since, but their hospitality in the places mentioned was fantastic. When attending business in London, Carina Gardner (née Montgomery), Karl Golden, and recently also Martin Brinkler took turns in housing me.

For the financial support of the many research trips, I am most grateful to the Raymond Carr Fund, St. Antony's College, Oxford, the Stahl Fund, St. Antony's College, Oxford, the Committee for Graduate Studies, Oxford, the Arnold, Bryce, and Read Modern History Funds, Modern History Faculty, Oxford, the Alastair Buchan Subsidiary Fund, Centre for International Studies, Oxford, and the Postgraduate Bursary Scheme of the German History Society (GHS). I am in particular debt to the German Historical Institute in London for financing a long summer of research in many German archives. Last, but most certainly not least, I would have to express my gratitude to the financiers of the Scatcherd European Scholarship, Oxford: without that three-year bursary, covering fees and maintenance, I would not even have started the endeavour of writing the doctoral thesis that eventually led to this book.

Many people have given me invaluable advice along the rocky road to completion. In no particular order, I would like to thank Alan Kramer, Margit Szöllösi-Janze, Robert Service, Arthur Hanhardt, James Byrne, Christoph Kleßmann, John Horne, Michael Hochgeschwender, Jim Livesey, Iaria Favretto, Carina Gardner (née Montgomery), Filipe Ribeiro de Meneses, Klaus Larres, Mark Lyttle, Sabine Wichert, Andreas Hess, Anselm Heinrich, and the late Mikael af Malmborg, who spent many an Oxford evening talking me through the very early stages of my research. Stefan Berger and Jonathan Wright examined the doctoral thesis early in 2004. Their suggestions significantly improved this book. Judith Devlin and Michael Laffan at University College Dublin kept kicking me up the backside to turn the doctoral thesis into a book rather quickly, and I am thankful for that. Michael, together with Bryan Fanning, is also co-responsible for the title of this book, conceived one late night in the UCD common room. Obviously, I am grateful to the members of staff at the many libraries and archives I visited (and listed elsewhere), but in particular I would like to thank the staff of the Newspaper Archive in Dortmund, as they are only represented in spirit, not in footnotes, since the footnotes only refer to the newspaper articles I found there. Dorothea Breitenfeldt of the Bremen State Archive (StAB) also deserves special thanks, since she alerted me to the importance of travel reports on my very first archival visit.

Many other people have commented upon my work at various stages, and thus given me important advice. It is impossible to name them all. I would however, like to thank all members of the German Historical Institute in London for their continuous moral and intellectual support. Henrike Müller (neither relative nor in-law) has looked at and commented upon important sections of the initial thesis. My gratitude also goes to Alexander Wilkinson and Ken Osgood, series editors of the Palgrave Studies in the History of the Media, who took a particularly keen look at the manuscript, Ruth Ireland and Michael Strang at Palgrave Macmillan, and Ruth Willats, for supervising the editorial progress so superbly, and the anonymous reader appointed by Palgrave Macmillan for providing invaluable suggestions.

My parents Helga and Klaus continued to support me in every possible way. Britta Mischek had to endure, at the shortest distance possible, my moods and the occasional absent-mindedness. She was also a constant source of encouragement and, as a fellow researcher of the European view of America, a provider of new ideas. All of them, I would like to thank. Finally, my thesis supervisor Tony Nicholls at St. Antony's College, Oxford deserves the last line of these acknowledgements: without his constant critical advice, his repeated reading and re-reading of the various pieces of work-in-progress, and the patience and compassion he has shown in many discussions, this book would be in no way like it is today.
