I have accumulated a vast number of debts en route to completing this book. Special thanks are due to Carl Bridge, Michael Dockrill, C. C. Eldridge, Anthony Low, my former history teacher Roger Jones, and above all my doctoral supervisor, David Reynolds. In Canberra I enjoyed the hospitality and conversation of Frank Cain, David Lees, John McCarthy, and Chris Waters. Wayne Reynolds welcomed me into his home in Newcastle, New South Wales, cast light on Doc Evatt, and introduced me to the vineyards of the Hunter Valley. I doubt any of these senior academics will remember me quite as clearly as I recall them, but I want each of them to know that their help and kindness was greatly appreciated. None is responsible for what follows.

The financial largesse of various organizations enabled me to pursue research in Australia, Britain, Canada, the United States and New Zealand. My main source of support throughout my doctoral studies was the British Academy. I also benefited from the generosity of the Britain-Australia Society, which awarded me a Northcote Visiting Scholarship, and the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library Institute, which awarded me a Lubin-Winant Research Fellowship. Additional support was provided by Downing College, the Harry S. Truman Library and the Smuts Memorial Fund.

My thanks go to the staff of the following institutions: the National Archives of Australia, Canberra; the Bodleian Library, Oxford; the British Library, London; the British Library of Political and Economic Science, London; the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, Hyde Park, New York; the Harry S. Truman Library, Independence, Missouri; the House of Lords Records Office, London; the Imperial War Museum, London; the National Archives of Canada, Ottawa; the National Library of Australia, Canberra; the New Zealand National Archives, Wellington; the Public Record Office, Kew; the United States National Archives, Washington D.C.; University Library, Cambridge; and the Washington National Records Center, Suitland, Maryland. I wish to express gratitude to Lady Batterbee for donating the papers of her late husband, Sir Harry Batterbee, to Rhodes House Library, Oxford.

The support of family and friends enabled me to see this project through to publication. My father, Arnold Orders, was a source of tremendous encouragement and inspiration. He taught me the value of education and would have been proud to see the results of my research in print. This book is dedicated to his memory and to Jayne Barrett and Maureen Orders, both of whom put up with me and somehow still keep smiling.
