

Part III

The Great Crisis of 2007–09

The financial crisis triggered by US subprime mortgage defaults, which started in summer 2007, was the worst since the Great Depression, due to its effects on the international financial system and real economy worldwide, on the parties involved, the figures at stake and for the sense of doom thrown onto mainstream economic beliefs. For these reasons, we decided to devote the third part of the book to it.