

Romantic Fiat

This page intentionally left blank

Romantic Fiat

Demystification and Enchantment in Lyric Poetry

Eric Reid Lindstrom

Department of English, University of Vermont, USA

palgrave
macmillan

© Eric Reid Lindstrom 2011

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2011 978-0-230-28236-0

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No portion of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, Saffron House, 6–10 Kirby Street, London EC1N 8TS.

Any person who does any unauthorized act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted his right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

First published 2011 by
PALGRAVE MACMILLAN

Palgrave Macmillan in the UK is an imprint of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan in the US is a division of St Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-32831-4 ISBN 978-0-230-29941-2 (eBook)

DOI 10.1057/9780230299412

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources. Logging, pulping and manufacturing processes are expected to conform to the environmental regulations of the country of origin.

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

A catalog record for this book is available from the Library of Congress.

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1
20 19 18 17 16 15 14 13 12 11

Contents

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| Acknowledgments  | vi  |
| Introduction: Fiat in Lyric   | 1   |
| Part I Giving Commands and Letting Go                            |     |
| 1 Romanticism and 'Exaggeration of Thought'                             | 25  |
| 2 The Command to Nature   | 50  |
| 3 Wordsworth's Useless Fiat in 'The Old Cumberland Beggar'              | 89  |
| Part II Ontology and the Lyric                                   |     |
| 4 Between Cant and Anguish: Hume in Coleridge'sImagination          | 115 |
| 5 Wordsworth and the Beautiful Day                                      | 139 |
| Part III Blessing Cursing  |     |
| 6 Contracting Obi: Shelley's Cosmopolitanism andthe Curse of Poetry | 171 |
| 7 Paper Money Poets   | 196 |
| Coda: Nature Poets and Fiat Money                                       | 215 |
| Notes  | 220 |
| Index  | 257 |

Acknowledgments

Since this is a first book, it is pretty much all composed of debts and secret debt. Both on and under the surface, the largest is to Paul Fry. I'm offering a baggy, probably unneeded, footnote. David Bromwich co-advised the first iteration of this project, leaving a wonderful and unattainable model for thinking hard and writing well. Also at Yale, Christopher R. Miller stood out for seeing the potential merit of my aim at an early point, at the same time showing concretely where it might have gone. Near the end of my time in the program, Katie Trumpener's presence was of signal importance in a broadening of scope that I hope continues.

Though I never sent him anything too good, Marshall Brown as an editor has improved several of the arguments included here, as well as their expression. Similarly, I'd like to acknowledge the shaping hand of Anonymous on this project: all timely pats and blows, whenever dealt – but especially when this project was just a busy garland of intentions. A complex gratitude hence goes to the many people who have helped this book considerably with constructive disapproval. (It deserved lots and may yet despite the attempts.) Several colleagues to offer invaluable leads (and to whom I am simply grateful) are acknowledged in the notes: for his conversation over the last couple years, Brian McGrath deserves one or two more. A true friend and interlocutor not otherwise mentioned is Eric Idsvoog. Tom Hyde helped sleuth for the cover art, which led, indirectly, to the choice of the relatively unknown Turner image used on the front cover of this book, as opposed to the more 'sublime' picture on Genesis and Goethe's color theory.

At Vermont – a place where everyone deserves mention – I'd like to thank Todd McGowan for setting a constant example of principled enthusiasm. Our two department chairs during my time so far, Loka Losambe and Tony Magistrale, have both been stalwartly level-headed and incredibly, continuously, supportive. My colleague in the Department of German and Russian, Dennis Mahoney, brought an exactitude as well as verve to his reading of Chapter 7. A more generous scholar cannot be imagined.

Then obligations go back. At Madison, Rick Begam exemplified a voice of philosophical modernity that I hope shows too in this book. I still think of Jacques Lezra's model in the classroom, as if to touch the place where I am hooked. I remember sitting in Cyrena Pondrom's office and talking incoherently about fiats instead of Hart Crane, or any other part of my college thesis, advised by this incredible teacher. She must have replied, roughly, 'Sounds like something you had better work out.'

Among those who go furthest back I want to thank my parents, Esther and Steve, for providing me with a happy life; and my two sisters, Katie and Amber, for filling it so admirably in their distinctive ways. Last, this book is dedicated to Angie, Veronica, and Maren and to our life together. Though your interests suffuse this project and its fate, I won't pretend and say your voices are directly represented here somehow – that's why I need you.

A slightly modified version of my essay 'Wordsworth's Choice of Fiat in "The Old Cumberland Beggar"' (Literary Imagination 9.3 [2007], 313–33) appears here as Chapter 3. Materials from that article are reprinted by kind permission of Oxford University Press.

The author is also grateful for permission to reprint from the following materials as epigraphs to various chapters: Dialectic of Enlightenment, by Max Horkheimer and T. W. Adorno, edited Gunzelin Schmid Noerr and translated Edmund Jephcott. © 1944 by Social Studies Foundation, NY. New edition © S. Fisher Verlag GmbH, Frankfurt am Main, 1969. English translation © 2002 Stanford University; 'Summa Lyrica: A Primer of Commonplaces in Speculative Poetics,' by Allen Grossman. © 1990 Western Humanities Review; In Quest of the Ordinary: Lines of Skepticism and Romanticism, by Stanley Cavell. © 1988 University of Chicago Press. Von Schwelle zu Schwelle, by Paul Celan. © 1982 Deutsche Verlag-Anstalt, München, in der Verlagsgruppe Random House GmbH.

Cover image: Joseph Mallord William Turner, The Angel Troubling the Pool (circa 1845). D36120, by Tate/ Digital Image © Tate, London 2009.

Back cover image: 'Division,' 2010, Richard Galpin. Courtesy of the Artist. Artwork originally commissioned for the New York Times Magazine, April 11, 2010. www.richardgalpin.co.uk