Palgrave Studies in Language History and Language Change

Series Editor: Charles Jones, Emeritus Forbes Professor of English, University of Edinburgh

This monograph series presents scholarly work in an increasingly active area of linguistic research. It deals with a worldwide range of language types and presents both descriptive and theoretically-orientated accounts of language change through time. Acknowledgments

It is my pleasure to thank Palgrave Macmillan for including the present book in their series.

This book includes some material, slightly adapted, that was originally published in article form. Chapter 4 originally appeared in the Journal of English Linguistics volume 34, number 4, pages 312–331, published by SAGE, and Section 4 of Chapter 6 originally appeared in the Journal of English Linguistics volume 38, number 1, pages 4–24. Further, Section 5 and part of Section 6 of Chapter 6 originally appeared in English Language and Linguistics volume 10, number 1, pages 31–48, published by Cambridge University Press. I want to acknowledge my indebtedness to both journals and publishers for their policy of permitting the inclusion of these materials in a book consisting solely of the author's own work. I also want to express my thanks to Professor Magnus Huber of the University of Giessen for permitting me to include a chapter based on the Old Bailey Corpus in the present book. Finally, I am happy to acknowledge that material from the Bank of English/Collins WordbanksOnline Corpus has been reproduced with the kind permission of HarperCollins Publishers Ltd.

This book has been under way for some years, and I have been able to benefit from conversations on complementation with colleagues and friends at various conferences in recent years. I want to especially mention Günter Rohdenburg, Thomas Egan, Hubert Cuyckens, and Uwe Vosberg in this respect. At the University of Tampere I have been fortunate in being able to turn to Ian Gurney for his sagacious counsel in matters of English grammar and usage. In addition, Veera Peteri, my part-time assistant at the University of Tampere, saved me from many an inaccuracy while writing this book. To them all I want to express my thanks. At the same time, I want to note that none of the people mentioned above is in any way responsible for the shortcomings that remain in this book. Those are entirely my responsibility.
