Preface

This book would never have seen the light of day without the generous help of many people. Its first supporter was my employer and friend, Michael Melvin. My only disappointment is that you didn't get to see this project completed in your lifetime. Other colleagues at Kairos Communications have consistently allowed me free rein to follow interesting and stimulating projects and Finbarr, Seb, Mary, Seamus, Phil, Anil, Henry, Roisin, Ita, Enda, and Edel are owed much thanks for their support in that regard. All of the tutors on the Kairos production training programmes deserve immense gratitude for their unstinting professionalism, which makes my task as academic co-ordinator so easy. In particular I would like to thank Yvonne McDonald, Simon Devilly, Bernardine Nic Giolla Phadraig, Eleanor Cunny, Pat Dunne, John McKenna, and Barry McCabe. At NUI Maynooth, both the Department of Sociology and the Department of Adult and Community Education have created environments where discussion, debate, and rigorous analysis are welcomed and responses to presentations of elements of this book have greatly assisted me. In particular, Professor Seán Ó Riain in the Department of Sociology was a very dedicated and insightful advisor. Other friends who have unfailingly encouraged me through long conversations, and in the reading of (probably seemingly endless) drafts are Josephine Finn, Niamh Gaynor, Fergal Rhatigan, and Anne Gallagher. I have worked with the Centre for Media Studies at NUIM since its foundation and Professor Chris Morash, Dr Stephanie Rains, Dr Gavan Titley, Dr Kylie Jarrett, Dr Denis Conlon, and Dr Katie Moylan have always helped me in innumerable ways with information, advice, and encouragement. Also the students of the Media Studies Centre have over the years contributed to a working life that is not just challenging but also a lot of fun. Many key informants in public and private bodies in Ireland helped with this research through frank and open-ended discussions. In particular I would like to thank Michael McNulty, former director general of Bord Fáilte; Paddy Teahon, former secretary general in the Department of An Taoiseach; an anonymous senior civil servant from the Department of Tourism; Paul O'Toole, former chief executive of Tourism Ireland; John Power, former chief executive of the Irish Hotels Federation; Jim Flannery, former chief executive of the Irish Hotels Federation; Brendan Leahy and Eileen O'Mara Walsh, former chief executives of the Irish Tourism Industry Confederation; Paul Gallagher, president of the Irish Hotels Federation; Eamonn McKeon, chief executive of Irish Tourism Industry Confederation; Aidan Pender, director of Development Strategy at Fáilte Ireland; and Niall Gibbons, chief executive of Tourism Ireland. All were most generous with their time and insights. While I have no doubt all will disagree in varying ways with the findings, their accounts of events are indispensable to the project of piecing together the story of Irish tourism's development. At Palgrave Macmillan Alexandra Webster, associate director and head of Social Sciences, was very supportive of the proposal. It has been a pleasure to deal with her, with Christina Brian and Renée Takken, her assistant who dealt with all practical issues adeptly and graciously. At a personal level, anyone with small children will appreciate the web of support that allows a mother the time, opportunity, and headspace to write. For their contributions in that regard I have to sincerely thank Margaret, John, Orla, and Katie Doyle for making their home my children's second home. To June, Anne, and Alison in Best Beginnings Playschool in Maynooth for giving Finn the very best beginning possible. To Val, Barry, Clara, and Jake, to Suzanne, Micheal, Rianne, Tom, and Alfie, to Seán, Eileen, Charlotte, and Isobel, to Rob, Ashe, Elliot, and Harvey, to Robert, Una, and Pete, to Siobhan, Gary, Killian, Conor, and Naoise, to Eileen, Shem, Tara, Conor, and Kyle, to Yvonne and Lara, to Muireann and Kate, to Josie and the Gallaghers and to Joe Harrington, thank you for the wonderful world of friendship that you've shared with us, through thick and thin, in the past few years. To my parents Seán and Eileen and my brother Pat, and to the rest of my family, Mia, Wim, Iesult, Naomi, and Zoe, thank you for your interest and support. Greatest thanks go to my sister Fiona, in her work she achieves things I never could, and along with Tom and Conor is always there for us. More than to anyone else, this book is dedicated with love, to my family Willie, Finn, and Odhrán van Velzen.
