

Creativity and Cultural Production

This page intentionally left blank

Creativity and Cultural Production

Issues for Media Practice

Phillip McIntyre

palgrave
macmillan

© Phillip McIntyre 2012

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2012 978-0-230-27228-6

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No portion of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, Saffron House, 6–10 Kirby Street, London EC1N 8TS.

Any person who does any unauthorized act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted his right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

First published 2012 by
PALGRAVE MACMILLAN

Palgrave Macmillan in the UK is an imprint of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan in the US is a division of St Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-32309-8 ISBN 978-0-230-35861-4 (eBook)
DOI 10.1057/9780230358614

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources. Logging, pulping and manufacturing processes are expected to conform to the environmental regulations of the country of origin.

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

A catalog record for this book is available from the Library of Congress.

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1
21 20 19 18 17 16 15 14 13 12

Contents

Acknowledgements	vi
Part I Theories about Creativity and Cultural Production
1 Introductory Perspectives on Creativity	3
2 The Creator as Genius	12
3 Bio-Psychological Perspectives	27
4 Creativity and the Social	41
5 The Cultural View	56
6 Reconceptualising Creativity	69
Part II Issues for Media Practice
7 Agency and Structure: The Case of Radio	89
8 Journalism: Structures and Motivation	103
9 Television: Form, Format and Being Formulaic	118
10 Film: Auteur Theory, Collaboration, Systems	133
11 Photography: Art, Craft and Their Symbiosis	148
12 Popular Music: Creativity and Authenticity	160
13 The Digital Revolution: Copyright and Creativity	176
14 Refocusing Methods for Creative Work	195
Bibliography	211
Index	226

Acknowledgements

A book like this, about a topic like this, could not have been made without the contribution of quite a number of people. I would like to thank some of them here. Firstly, let me say that all the professionals I have dealt with at Palgrave Macmillan have been a pleasure to work with. For granting me the leave to write, while others were slaving over a lectern and computer, the University of Newcastle also has my heartfelt thanks. This institution has given me such a privileged existence. All my colleagues in the School of Design, Communication and IT should be thanked for their support, advice and kindness over the years. The undergrads who have been challenged by my ideas deserve a very large vote of thanks for debating them with me. They have been a tough audience, a hard set of critics and a great pleasure to engage with. I would especially like to thank the honours and postgraduate students who have taken up the opportunities a topic like this presents. For their constant encouragement of my work, I would particularly like to thank Judith Sandner, Susan Kerrigan, Janet Fulton, Chloe Killen, Gaye Sheather, Sarah Coffee, Harry Criticos and, especially, Michael Meany. I have also been fortunate to have had the benefit of John Tulloch's years of experience, which came at just the right moment. His guiding hand has been particularly helpful in bringing this book to completion. He has been a mentor, colleague, critic and friend. Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi also graciously answered my queries and Keith Sawyer, in particular, deserves thanks for not only leading the way but also providing the space for me to contribute. While I was on leave in the United Kingdom working on this book, there were many who, firstly, took my work seriously and, secondly, provided laughter and friendship when it was needed. These friends include Bob Davis, Paul Thompson, Steve Kilpatrick, Rees Archibald and Steve Parker, all from Leeds Metropolitan University. In particular, it is Justin Morey who took my family under his wing and made our stay in England the most memorable we have had. I'd also like to thank Sarah Cohen at Liverpool University, Keith Negus at Goldsmiths College and David Hesmondhalgh at Leeds University for taking the time to engage in dialogue and for giving me the space to present these ideas. Dinners with Phil Tagg were engaging, stimulating and rewarding. I'd also like to thank all the scholars from the Art of Record Production (ARP) who provided welcome conversations and critical input when it was needed. Pam Burnard from Cambridge University was especially encouraging, and I would like to thank her for her contagious enthusiasm and intellectual energy. My children, Kylie, Zoe, Elizabeth, Alexander, Isaac and Benny, keep me in my place and remind me what all this effort is really about. Isaac has willingly taken up the challenge a scriptwriter's life presents and Elizabeth, especially, took on the idea of creativity and made it her own. She writes the way I would like to write. Mum and Dad – I hope it was worth it. Finally, but never last, I want to tell Julie this could not have been done without her love, her constant encouragement and her faith in me. Her willingness to take journeys to all sorts of places makes her the most cherished of all those I love.

This book is based, in part, on some of my previous writings. I would like to thank the various publishers for permission to use parts of the following articles:

- McIntyre, P. (2006a) 'Radio Program Directors, Music Directors and the Creation of Popular Music', in S. Healy, B. Berryman & D. Goodman (eds) Radio in the World: Radio Conference 2005 (Melbourne: RMIT Publishing), pp. 449–60.
- McIntyre, P. (2007) 'Copyright and Creativity: Changing Paradigms and the Implications for Intellectual Property and the Music Industry', Media International Australia Incorporating Cultural Policy, 123, 82–94.
- McIntyre, P. (2008) 'Creativity and Cultural Production: A Study of Contemporary Western Popular Music Songwriting', Creativity Research Journal, 20(1), 40–52.
- McIntyre, P. (2009a) 'Rethinking the Idea of the Mainstream/Alternative Dichotomy in Contemporary Western Popular Music in the Light of Recent Research into Creativity', in C. Strong & M. Phillipov (eds) Stuck in the Middle: The Mainstream and Its Discontents, Selected Proceedings of the 2008 IASPM-ANZ Conference (Brisbane: International Association for the Study of Popular Music), 28–30 November 2008, pp. 142–51.
- McIntyre, P. (2009b) 'Rethinking Communication, Creativity and Cultural Production: Outlining Issues for Media Practice', in T. Flew (ed.) Communication, Creativity and Global Citizenship: Refereed Proceedings of the Australian and New Zealand Communications Association Annual Conference, Brisbane, July 8–10, <http://www.proceedings.anzca09.org>. (This work is licensed under the Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 2.5 Australian License. To view a copy of this license, visit <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-sa/2.5/au/> or send a letter to Creative Commons, 171 Second Street, Suite 300, San Francisco, California, 94105, USA.)