Acknowledgments

This book would not have been possible without support from Harvard University in the form of an Andrew W. Mellon faculty fellowship (1987–88). I am particularly grateful to Barbara Johnson for her suggestions, interest, and encouragement at the inception of this project. In addition I would like to thank Matei Calinescu, William Claude Griffin, Susan Stanford Friedman, and Gene M. Moore for their challenging comments on my manuscript, and members of the English Department at Virginia Commonwealth University for their continued encouragement of my work. Special thanks are due to Sarah Roberts-West, Margaret Cannon of the Macmillan Press, Ltd., and Ray Dennerstein of Dolphin Editorial Consultancy for their competent and reliable assistance.

It is a pleasure to acknowledge the direct contribution of my students to the ideas in this book through their inspiring discussion and critical work in my seminars. This book is dedicated therefore to all of them for having accepted the challenge of narrative and critical writing.

Some material in Chapters 1, 6 and 8 appeared in different, earlier drafts in Semiotics 1986, eds John Deely and Jonathan Evans (Lanham, New York: University Press of America, 1987), pp. 125–39; The European Studies Journal, 6/2 (1989): 30–49; and in The Journal of Narrative Technique, 20/1 (Winter 1990), special issue ed. Susan Stanford Friedman.
