INTERNAL MIGRATION IN CONTEMPORARY CHINA

Also by Delia Davin

WOMAN-WORK: Women and the Party in Revolutionary China

CHINA'S ONE-CHILD FAMILY POLICY (editor with E. Croll and P. Kane)

CHINESE LIVES: an Oral History of Contemporary China (by Zhang Xinxin and Sang Ye, editor and translator with W. J. F. Jenner)

MAO ZEDONG

Internal Migration in Contemporary China

Delia Davin

*Head of Department and Reader in Chinese Social Studies
University of Leeds*

First published in Great Britain 1999 by
MACMILLAN PRESS LTD
Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS and London
Companies and representatives throughout the world

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

ISBN 978-1-349-40373-8 ISBN 978-0-230-37671-7 (eBook)
DOI 10.1057/9780230376717

First published in the United States of America 1999 by
ST. MARTIN'S PRESS, INC.,

Scholarly and Reference Division,
175 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10010

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data
Davin, Delia.

Internal migration in contemporary China / Delia Davin.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

1. Migration, Internal—China—History—20th century. I. Title.

HB2114.A3D38 1998

304.8'0951'0904—dc21

98-28378

CIP

© Delia Davin 1999

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 1999 978-0-333-71731-8

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No paragraph of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, 90 Tottenham Court Road, London W1P 9HE.

Any person who does any unauthorised act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted her right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources.

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1
08 07 06 05 04 03 02 01 00 99

Contents

List of Tables	vii
List of Figures	viii
Chinese-language Newspapers and Magazines Cited in English in the Text	ix
Money and Measures	x
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	1
1 Migration in China after 1949	4
Restrictions on population movement	4
Enforcement of the hukou system	7
The economics of the urban/rural divide	8
Rural to urban migration, 1950s to the 1970s	10
Types of migration in pre-reform China	14
Summary	18
2 An Overview of Migration since 1978	20
Investigating migration in the post-reform era	20
Categories and terminology in Chinese migration studies	21
Sources for migration data	23
Sex and age distribution of migrants	26
Educational level	32
Direction and destination of migration	33
Summary	38
3 Reform Era Policies on Population Movement	39
The small town policy	40
The introduction of temporary registration	42
Hukou transfers and sales	44
Identity cards	46
Facilitating migration	47
Summary and prospects	48
4 Why People Migrate	49
Macro perspectives	50
Demographic factors	71

Micro determinants of migration and migratory behaviour	73
5 The Impact of Migration in the Sending Areas	78
Work, land and household	79
Remittances and presents	87
Lifestyle and attitudinal change	89
Migration and economic inequality	92
Costs and benefits of migration for the sending areas	94
6 Migrants' Lives and Impacts in the Destination Areas	98
Migrants in the changing cities	99
Construction workers	111
Domestic service	112
The Special Economic Zones	115
Conclusion	119
7 Women and Migration	121
Migrant sex ratios and the position of women in Chinese society	121
The impact of migration on women's lives	124
Migration and female autonomy	126
Migrant fertility	130
Migrants and prostitution	133
Conclusion	136
8 Marriage Migration	137
When marriage means migration	137
Mate selection in rural China	139
The spatial hierarchy of marriage after the economic reforms	143
Problems arising from long-distance marriage	147
Conclusion	149
9 Responses to Migration and the Prospects for the Future	151
Media images	151
Residents and migrants – another look at the divide	154
Freedom of movement and the control of migration	157
Notes	161
Bibliography	165
Index	175

List of Tables

Table 2.1	Female migration as a percentage of internal migration by origin (residence in 1985) and destination (residence 1990).	29
Table 2.2	Percentages of intra-county, intra-provincial and inter-provincial migrants among migrants nationally and in each of the three regions.	34
Table 2.3	Internal migration in China by origin (residence in 1985) and destination (residence 1990).	37
Table 3.1	Non-agricultural population, selected years, 1956–95.	44
Table 4.1	Population and area by region (1995).	55
Table 4.2	Data for Figures 4.1 and 4.4–4.8.	64
Table 4.3	Age distribution of Chinese population: changing percentages of total population in different age groups, selected years, 1964–95.	72
Table 8.1	Marriage as a percentage of all reported causes of migration by destination of migrants (1990 residence) – Census data.	138
Table 8.2	Marriage as a reported cause of inter-provincial out-migration (%) and in-migration by province.	145

List of Figures

Figure 4.1	Per capita gross domestic product by province.	51
Figure 4.2	Provinces and economic regions in China	53
Figure 4.3	Regional shares of total investment in capital construction, 1953–92.	55
Figure 4.4	Per capita industrial output by province.	59
Figure 4.5	Per capita rural household net income by province.	60
Figure 4.6	Per capita output of town and village enterprises by province.	61
Figure 4.7	Per capita foreign direct investment by province (US$).	62
Figure 4.8	Per capita total construction output value by province.	63

Graphics based on copy supplied by the Graphics Unit, School of Geography, University of Leeds.

Chinese-language Newspapers and Magazines Cited in English in the Text

Beijing Youth News (Beijing Qingnianbao)
Chinese Business Times (Huasheng Shibao)
Chinese Rural Economy (Zhongguo Nongcun Jingji)
Chinese Youth (Zhongguo Qingnian)
Consumer Times (Xiaofei Shibao)
Democracy and Law (Minzhu yu Fazhi)
Guangming Daily (Guangming Daily)
Labour News (Laodong Bao)
Legal Daily (Fazhi Ribao)
Peasant Daily (Nongmin Ribao)
Outlook (Liaowang)
Population and Economics (Renkou yu Jingji)
Tianjin Evening News (Jinwanbao)
Wenhui News (Wenhui bao, Shanghai)
Yangcheng (Guangzhou) Evening News (Yangcheng Wanbao).

Money and Measures

Yuan – Chinese unit of currency also known as renminbi, RMB. There were approximately 13 yuan to the £ sterling and 8 yuan to the US$ in 1998.

Mu – Chinese measurement of area. There are 6.6 mu to an acre and 15 mu to a hectare.

Acknowledgements

I am grateful to the Nuffield Foundation and to the University of Leeds for grants to me and a colleague, Dr Mahmood Messkoub of the Leeds Business School, which enabled us to make a research trip to Beijing and Sichuan in September 1994. I also wish to record my gratitude to the British Academy for funding to attend a migration conference in Beijing in December 1994. Like many other researchers on Chinese population mobility, I am indebted to the Beijing Office of the Ford Foundation whose programme of support for research on China's rural-urban mobility not only made possible much work by Chinese scholars, but also enabled them to come together both with each other and with foreign scholars to share ideas and findings. I would particularly like to thank Mr Steve McGurk, the Economics Programme Officer at the Foundation's Beijing Office, for his vision in promoting this programme and his generosity to me with time, information and contacts on many occasions.

In Beijing I received help and advice from colleagues at the China Population Information and Research Centre, the Institutes of Sociology and of Rural Development of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, the Research Centre for the Rural Economy of the Ministry of Agriculture, Horizon Market Research and Policy Analysis Inc., and at Beijing University and the People's University. In Chengdu, in 1994, members of the Institute of Rural Development of the Sichuan Academy of Social Sciences were generous with extended briefings on the research they were carrying out and with assistance for fieldwork. I am grateful for their time and patience. I also received much help and hospitality from friends in China, among them, Mary Ann Burris, David and Isabel Crook, Michael Crook, Jørgen Delman, David Jacobsen, Liu Bohong, Tan Shen, Wan Shanping, Gladys Yang and Yang Xianyi, Yang Zhi and Zhang Kaining.

I was often surprised by the tolerance of migrant informants in China who gave up time to talk to me – often the first foreigner to whom they had even spoken – to help with a project whose purposes remained unclear to them. They helped me greatly by sharing their experiences and perceptions and I would like to acknowledge their kindness.

I learnt much from papers presented by Chinese and western colleagues at three international conferences on Chinese population mobility held in 1996: at Cologne in May, Beijing in June, and Oxford in July. Many friends have shared their ideas and their work with me or given me help with mine. I cannot name them all, but would especially like to mention Haleh Afshar, Judith Banister, Jean Philippe Béja, Greg Benton, Michel Bonnin, Ray Bush, Flemming Christiansen, Kam Wing Chan, Elisabeth Croll, Jutta Hebel, Caroline Hoy, the late Frank Leeming, Hein Mallee, Ma Xiaodong, Mahmood Messkoub, Thomas Scharping, Christopher Smith, Dorothy Solinger, Lina Song, Emma Stone, Owen Wells, Loraine West, Xiang Biao and Marilyn Young.

I want to thank my colleagues in the Department of East Asian Studies at the University of Leeds, my friends and, above all, my family, for their patience with the extra burdens that my preoccupation with this book has inevitably imposed on them. Finally, I wish to record my debt to my parents. From my earliest childhood, stories of the migration of their parents and grandparents from the west of Ireland to New Zealand gave me an interest in the forces that drive people to leave their homes and families in search of a living elsewhere, and a sympathy with the struggles and sufferings of migrants everywhere.

Delia Davin
Leeds 1998