General Editors: Michael Butler is Emeritus Professor of Modern German Literature at the University of Birmingham and Professor William E. Paterson OBE is Professor of European and German Politics at the University of Birmingham and Chairman of the German British Forum.

Over the last twenty years the concept of German studies has undergone major transformation. The traditional mixture of language and literary studies, related very closely to the discipline as practised in German universities, has expanded to embrace history, politics, economics and cultural studies. The conventional boundaries between all these disciplines have become increasingly blurred, a process which has been accelerated markedly since German unification in 1989/90.

New Perspectives in German Studies, developed in conjunction with the Institute for German Studies and the Department of German Studies at the University of Birmingham, has been designed to respond precisely to this trend of the interdisciplinary approach to the study of German and to cater for the growing interest in Germany in the context of European integration. The books in this series will focus on the modern period, from 1750 to the present day.

This book is based on papers given at an international conference held at Birmingham in September 2002. The findings represent the first major outcome of a multi-disciplinary research project, centred on the University of Birmingham but drawing together an international team of specialists in the history, literature, culture and politics of modern Germany, with its unique experience of undergoing the process of national unification twice in just over a century. The project was made possible by the support of the Arts and Humanities Research Board. We owe a great debt of gratitude to the AHRB for its generous funding and for its help and advice at each stage of the work. We are particularly grateful to Dr Elystan Griffiths and Dr Karoline von Oppen, the research fellows on whose academic research and organisational skills the project team, led by Professor Michael Butler, relied heavily. We are grateful to Joel Love for help with translation and indexing. Thanks are also due to a number of colleagues who gave welcome advice and criticism at a workshop in Birmingham at an early stage of the process: Elizabeth Boa, Chris Clark, Anthony Nicholls, Jonathan Osmond, and Peter Pulzer. Finally, we are grateful to the London branch of the Goethe Institut for the support which enabled Friedrich Christian Delius to read from Die Birnen von Ribbeck and lead a discussion at the opening meeting of the conference.
