Notes on the Contributors

C. Scott Dixon is Senior Lecturer in European Studies at the Queen's University of Belfast and lectures on British History at the University of Vienna. His publications include The Reformation and Rural Society. The Parishes of Brandenburg-Ansbach-Kulmbach, 1528–1603 (Cambridge, 1996), (editor) The German Reformation: The Essential Readings (Oxford, 1999), and The Reformation in Germany (Oxford, 2002). He is presently completing a book on the historiography of the European Reformation.

Jay Goodale is Assistant Professor of History at Bucknell University. He has held visiting appointments at UCLA, the Max Planck Institute for History and the University of Erfurt. Professor Goodale has published several articles on the rural Reformation in journals and edited volumes, and is completing a book on how clerical–lay relations affected the reception and development of the Reformation in Saxony and Thuringia.

Bruce Gordon is Reader in Modern History and Deputy Director of the Reformation Studies Institute at the University of St Andrews. His publications include The Swiss Reformation (Manchester, 2002); The Place of the Dead (with Peter Marshall) (Cambridge, 2000); and (editor) Protestant History and Identity in Sixteenth-Century Europe (Aldershot, 1996).

Ian Green is Professor of Early Modern History in the School of History at the Queen's University of Belfast. He is the author of many articles on the early modern English clergy and church, and of 'The Christian's ABC': Catechisms and Catechizing in England c. 1530–1730 (Oxford, 1996) and Print and Protestantism in Early Modern England (Oxford, 2000). He is currently working on the last part of this trilogy, entitled Word, Image, and Ritual in Early Modern English Protestantism.

Mark Greengrass works on the history of France in the Renaissance and Reformation. He has published on the French Reformation, the French wars of religion and the reign of Henri IV. He is currently completing a monograph on 'Governing Passions: the Reformation of the Kingdom of France, 1576–1586', which explores the yearning for fundamental change generated by the religious wars of the later sixteenth century. He is the executive director of the 'John Foxe Project', which aims to produce a scholarly edition of his famous Elizabethan martyrology and holds a personal chair in the Department of History at the University of Sheffield.

Susan C. Karant-Nunn is Director of the Division for Late Medieval and Reformation Studies as well as Professor of History at the University of Arizona. Her monograph, The Reformation of Ritual: An Interpretation of Early Modern Germany (London, 1997), won the 1998 Roland H. Bainton Prize of the Sixteenth-Century Studies Conference. With Merry E. Wiesner-Hanks she has edited Luther on Women: A Sourcebook (Cambridge, 2003). She is writing a book on the Reformations and the emotions.

Thomas Kaufmann is Professor of Church History in the Faculty of Theology at the Georg-August University, Göttingen, Germany. Prior to this appointment he held a chair in the Faculty of Evangelical Theology at the Ludwig-Maximilian University, Munich (1996–2000). His publications include: Die Abendmahlstheologie der Straßburger Reformatoren bis 1529 (Tübingen, 1992); Universität und lutherische Konfessionalisierung (Gütersloh, 1997); Dreißigjähriger Krieg und Westfälischer Friede. Kirchengeschichtliche Studien zur lutherischer Konfessionskultur (Tübingen, 1998); Reformatoren (Göttingen, 1998); (editor) Evangelische Kirchenhistoriker im 'Dritten Reich' (Gütersloh, 2002); and Das Ende der Reformation. Magdeburgs 'Herrgottskanzlei' 1548–1551/2 (Tübingen, in press). His research interests lie in the area of church history and theology of the early modern period.

R. Emmet McLaughlin is Associate Professor of History at Villanova University (USA). He is the author of Caspar Schwenckfeld, Reluctant Radical: His Life to 1540 (New Haven, 1986) and The Freedom of Spirit, Social Privilege, and Religious Dissent: Caspar Schwenckfeld and the Schwenckfelders (Baden-Baden, 1996). He has also published on the Radical Reformation generally and the intellectual roots of the Reformation.

Luise Schorn-Schütte is Professor of Modern History at the Johann Wolfgang Goethe Universität, Frankfurt am Main, Germany. Her publications include Evangelische Geistlichkeit in der Frühneuzeit. Deren Anteil an der Entfaltung frühmoderner Staatlichkeit und Gesellschaft (Gütersloh, 1996); Die Reformation: Vorgeschichte – Verlauf – Wirkung (München, 1996); and (editor with W. Sparr) Evangelische Pfarrer: zur sozialen und politischen Rolle einer bürgerlichen Gruppe in der deutschen Gesellschaft des 18. bis 20. Jahrhunderts (Stuttgart, 1997). Her research interests lie in the area of political thought in the early modern period, Reformation history and theories of history.

R.N. Swanson is Professor of Medieval Ecclesiastical History at the University of Birmingham, and has worked extensively on assorted aspects of European church history from the twelfth to the sixteenth century, with a concentration on England after the Black Death. His books include Church and Society in Late Medieval England (Oxford, 1989), Religion and Devotion in Europe, c.1215–c.1515 (Cambridge, 1995) and The Twelfth Century Renaissance (Manchester, 1999). He is currently completing a book on indulgences in pre-Reformation England.
