I am extremely grateful to many persons and institutions who, in different ways, helped me in the writing of this book. As the book is a revised version of my doctoral thesis, the first person I wish to thank is my supervisor in the University of Oxford, Alan Angell, who encouraged me to work on the politics of privatization and who gave me permanent support for the completion of this task. I also owe special gratitude to Ana María Mustapic, in the Universidad Torcuato Di Tella, for once having introduced me to the study of political institutions, and having always helped me with her intellectual support, friendship, and many other kindnesses. Both of them patiently read several versions of the manuscript and greatly contributed to its improvement. I am also grateful to Juan Carlos Torre, from whose writings and conversation on Argentine politics I have learned so much, and to Ana Margheritis and Vicente Palermo, colleagues, friends, and partners in the difficult task of disentangling the recent developments in Argentine politics. St Antony's College, in Oxford, and Universidad Torcuato Di Tella, which kindly received me during my stay in Buenos Aires, were the most stimulating environments in which to write and conduct research: warm thanks to all the friends and colleagues who gave me unstinting intellectual support, wise advice on my work, and invaluable practical help. I equally wish to thank Peter Waldmann and the Institut für Spanien- und Lateinamerikastudien at the University of Augsburg, since without their support the latest corrections of this manuscript would have not been possible. I am also greatly indebted to Ruth Hodges at the Latin American Centre in Oxford, who made most of the language and style corrections. Finally, I am eternally grateful to my family and friends, whose love, company and moral support always accompanied me in the long process of writing.

Indeed, all responsibility for errors is mine alone.
