Fags, Hags and Queer Sisters

This page intentionally left blank

Fags, Hags and Queer Sisters

Gender Dissent and Heterosocial Bonds in Gay Culture

Stephen Maddison

© Stephen Maddison 2000

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2000 978-0-333-77661-2

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No paragraph of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, 90 Tottenham Court Road, London W1P 0LP.

Any person who does any unauthorised act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted his right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

First published 2000 by
MACMILLAN PRESS LTD
Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS and London

Companies and representatives
throughout the world

ISBN 978-0-333-77662-9

ISBN 978-0-333-98519-9 (eBook)

DOI 10.1057/9780333985199

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources.

10	9	8	7	6	5	4	3	2	1
09	08	07	06	05	04	03	02	01	00

*With love and thanks to the women who brought me up to be a Nice Boy:
Mary Gibbs, Lil Worrall, Lottie Charlton,
Doreen Maddison, Betty Chilcott, and Patricia Maddison.*

And to AH, who's a very Nice Boy.

This page intentionally left blank

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
Fags, female icons and Stonewall	1
Fags, hags and queer sistership	9
1 From Pathology to Gender Dissent:
Tennessee Williams's A Streetcar Named Desire	14
1.1 Streetcar: Perversion or great American (queer) art?	17
Inversion: Maurice and unrequited desire	20
Coming out: Stonewall and gay politics	28
A Streetcar Named Desire : a gay play?	31
From gender to libido (and back again?)	37
1.2 Streetcar: a play with gender?	43
Stanley Kowalski: Polack, stud, husband	44
Miss DuBois: queer defiance?	49
2 Heterosocial Tendencies	64
A case of sexuality or gender? Feminism and queer theory	64
Homosocial regimes, male power and not getting fucked	72
Pulp Fiction : fucking butch	76
Homosocial dissent, female bonding	82
Mapping heterosocial bonds	87
Straight talking: get some Attitude	94
Slash fantasies/heterosocial bonds	97
3 Roseanne: Domestic Goddess as Heterosocial Heroine?	102
Roseanne and political credibility	106
Roseanne and homosociality: the queer challenge	111
'I now pronounce you men': Queer marriage and the domestic goddess	124
Mary-come-lately or gay goddess?	132
4 Pedro Almodóvar and Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown: the Heterosocial Spectator and Misogyny	138
A Case of public or private?	139
Liberal titillation and the regime of the couple	143

Queer opportunities	148
Women on the verge of queer sistership?	153
The woman's film as gay film?	157
Edward II : queer homosociality?	162
Hysteria and heterosocial dissent	169
Conclusion	182
Fag Hag : a cautionary tale?	182
Fags, hags and gender dissent	189
Notes	198
Index	217

Acknowledgements

I came into academia because I understood it to be a place where I could explore what it meant to be gay, and the investments I have made in this piece of writing have been so important because they have been about trying to understand how my identity works. Of course, academia is not a free place for thinking about the world in deep and meaningful ways, it is a highly regulated institution where you have to learn to be resilient if you want to write about anything that has any emotional value whatsoever: in academia intellectual endeavour is surplus labour. Indulging in the luxury of intellectual exploration has entailed the negotiation of a number of governing institutional frameworks, from funding applications and the professional induction process of PhD examination, succumbing to the competitive frenzy of job interviews where a monograph accrues added status, to the mechanical league tabling of my department's RAE profile.

In the process of all these negotiations (oh, and in the intellectual pursuit too) I have notched up a considerable number of favours in the last seven years, and there are many people who I want to thank. I am grateful for the financial support I have received from the British Academy, who awarded me a three year studentship, without which I could never have taken this seriously. I am also grateful for the financial support I have been given by my dad, Phil Maddison, and my mum, Pat Maddison, and by Andrew Hutton.

The following people helped me on my way. They read drafts, bits of drafts, scribbles on envelopes, they gave me places to stay, they gave me references, they inspired me, or gave me confidence, or got me going. Love and thanks to: Helen Barlow, Jonathan Dollimore, Alex Doty, Richard Dyer, Nicky Harper, Val Hill, Kate Lacey, Vincent Quinn, Linda Rozmovits, Corinne Shirman-Sarti, Jane Valentine, Sue Wiseman and Alicia Wood.

Thanks go to staff and students I have worked with in the department of Cultural Studies at the University of East London and at Sussex University who have taught me much more than seven years of reading could have. Special thanks to the Information Services Department at Sussex University Library who provided a service far in excess of what budgetary realities might lead us to expect. Thanks to Bette Bourne who graciously read bits of Belle Reprieve to me over the phone before it was published and whom I was too shy to thank properly at the time (there is a seriously bona Queen for you).

Spectacular, sequin-encrusted thanks to Alan Sinfield who has offered tremendous support, institutional back up and vigorous intellectual stimulation. Thanks to Andy Medhurst who reminded me that being a Queen is the highest form of life we can aspire to. Thanks to my fierce sister, Nick Dearden. Thanks to Ben Gove, with whom I shared every hand-wringing detail of this. Thanks to Paula Graham, whose emotional and intellectual judgement I always trust implicitly. Thanks to my mum, Patricia Maddison, a queer icon if ever there was one, and my dad, Phil Maddison, who have both supported me throughout. Lastly, big hugs and kisses to Andrew Hutton, who makes me feel like I've come home.