

Prisons, Punishment and the Pursuit of Security

Critical Criminological Perspectives

The Palgrave Critical Criminological Perspectives book series aims to showcase the importance of critical criminological thinking when examining problems of crime, social harm and criminal and social justice. Critical perspectives have been instrumental in creating new research agendas and areas of criminological interest. By challenging state defined concepts of crime and rejecting positive analyses of criminality, critical criminological approaches continually push the boundaries and scope of criminology, creating new areas of focus and developing new ways of thinking about, and responding to, issues of social concern at local, national and global levels. Recent years have witnessed a flourishing of critical criminological narratives and this series seeks to capture the original and innovative ways that these discourses are engaging with contemporary issues of crime and justice.

Series editors:

Professor Reece Walters

Faculty of Law, Queensland University of Technology, Australia

Dr. Deborah Drake

Department of Social Policy and Criminology, The Open University, UK

Deborah Drake

PRISONS, PUNISHMENT AND THE PURSUIT OF SECURITY

Maggi O'Neill and Lizzie Seal (editors)

TRANSGRESSIVE IMAGINATIONS

Crime, Deviance and Culture

Critical Criminological Perspectives

Series Standing Order ISBN 9780-230-36045-7 hardback

(outside North America only)

You can receive future titles in this series as they are published by placing a standing order. Please contact your bookseller or, in case of difficulty, write to us at the address below with your name and address, the title of the series and the ISBN quoted above.

Customer Services Department, Macmillan Distribution Ltd, Houndmills,
Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS, England

Prisons, Punishment and the Pursuit of Security

Deborah H. Drake

*Lecturer in Criminology,
Department of Social Policy and Criminology,
The Open University, UK*

palgrave macmillan

© Deborah H. Drake 2012

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2012 978-0-230-28293-3

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No portion of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, Saffron House, 6–10 Kirby Street, London EC1N 8TS.

Any person who does any unauthorized act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted her right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

First published 2012 by
PALGRAVE MACMILLAN

Palgrave Macmillan in the UK is an imprint of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan in the US is a division of St Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-32872-7

ISBN 978-1-137-00483-3 (eBook)

DOI 10.1057/9781137004833

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources. Logging, pulping and manufacturing processes are expected to conform to the environmental regulations of the country of origin.

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Drake, Deborah.

Prisons, punishment and the pursuit of security / Deborah Drake.

p. cm.

ISBN 978-1-349-32872-7

1. Prisons—England. 2. Justice, Administration of—England.

3. Prisons—United States. 4. Justice, Administration of—United States. I. Title.

HV8424.A62012 .D73 2012

365'.942—dc23

2012010269

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1
21 20 19 18 17 16 15 14 13 12

Contents

List of Tables and Figures	viii
Acknowledgements	ix
1 Demythologising the Prison and its Uses	1
Introduction	1
The (purported) purposes and (hidden) functions of the prison	1
The quest for security	3
The superficiality of evil	6
Puncturing the myths: the importance of exposing ideologies	10
Overview of the chapters	13
2 The Growing Hegemony of Imprisonment	15
Introduction	15
The trend towards penal convergence	16
Questioning the ‘newness’ of punitiveness	18
Political economy and social determinants of prison use	19
The ideological architecture of imprisonment	20
Common features within ideologies of imprisonment	23
Exploring global justifications of imprisonment	26
Prisons and insecurity	29
Conclusion	31
3 Establishing Long-Term, Maximum-Security Imprisonment in England	33
Introduction	33
The bulky machinery of prisons and criminal justice	34
Ideological and historical underpinnings of English maximum-security prisons	35
The values of the liberal elite	35
The abolition of the death penalty	36
Establishing maximum-security prisons	38
The Mountbatten Report	39
The Radzinowicz Report	42
Paternalistic liberalism	43
Dispersal prisons in practice 1968–94	45
Problems of order and control	46

Enter law-and-order politics	49
Conclusion	52
4 A State of Security in Maximum-Security Prisons	54
Introduction	54
A reorientation of penal thinking and practice	55
The political context	55
Key events and policy influences	56
Dispersal prisons in practice from 1995 onwards	60
The primary goal of security	62
Prisoners as enemies within	65
The ideology of security and its role in harsh justice	68
Conclusion	71
5 Long-Term, Maximum-Security Punishment	73
Introduction	73
Foregoing studies of prison life	75
The subjectivity of assessing experiences of prisons and punishment	78
Understanding prisoner experiences	79
Long-term, maximum-security punishment	81
Constituting punishment	81
The principle of less eligibility	83
The loss of liberty	85
The maintenance of in/security	88
Uses of power and authority	93
Condemnation and judgement: the context of rehabilitation	98
Meaninglessness	101
Conclusion: a 'suitable amount of pain'?	106
6 Constituting Security in the Penal and the Social Realms	109
Introduction	109
Security in the penal realm	110
A chimera of safety and security	111
The invisibility of coercion in the security regime	113
The security regime and the art of concealment	117
Security in the social realm	120
Crime and security as political projects	121
The place of the prison within security agendas and global economic relations	124
Pursuing a subjective sense of security as a more viable security agenda	127

Penal severity and the globalising myth of security	128
Conclusion: rethinking security?	132
7 The Duplicity of Criminal Justice, Violent Crime and the Problem with Punishment	133
Introduction	133
Duplicity and contradiction in law and criminal justice	134
The rhetoric of rationality in law and criminal justice	136
The morality of criminal justice and punishment	137
Violent crime, the question of evil and the call for vengeance	139
The question of evil	140
Vengeance and criminal justice	142
Populism, politics and punishment: barriers to thinking differently about justice	143
When the state constructs citizens as other	144
A battle of rights: protection from the state and protection from each other	148
Populism and emotion	151
The trouble with punishment	154
Punishment causes violence	156
Conclusion	158
8 Making the Unthinkable Thinkable	160
Introduction	160
The denigration of humanity in the pursuit of security	161
Recognising the coefficient of harm	164
Thinking the unthinkable	166
Beyond morality	168
Thinking about crime and punishment without morality?	169
Ending punishment	172
Reconciliatory justice?	174
Conclusion	176
Appendix: Research Methods and Reflections on Researching Maximum-Security Prisons	178
Notes	195
References	201
Index	215

List of Tables and Figures

Tables

2.1	Selected imprisonment rates per 100,000 population in 2000 and 2011 and percentage change	16
6.1	Staff and prisoner assaults in maximum-security prisons 1993–99	111
6.2	Staff and prisoner assaults in maximum-security prisons 2000–09	112

Figures

A.1	Sentence lengths	182
A.2	Security categorisations	183
A.3	Criminal convictions	183
A.4	Ethnic backgrounds	184

Acknowledgements

I am immeasurably grateful to my colleagues in the Department of Social Policy and Criminology at the Open University. It is just the right environment for nurturing critical scholarship and I feel privileged to work with you all. In particular, I want to thank those who provided encouragement throughout the writing process and took over some of my other work so that I could concentrate on finishing this book: Abigail Rowe, Louise Westmarland, Allan Cochrane, Ross Fergusson, Damon Briggs, Kate Smith, Katy Simmons, Ali Andrew, Hilary Canneaux, Adam Nightingale, Gerry Mooney, Sarah Neal and Graham Pike. I also want to thank Donna Collins for her expert administrative support and her constant willingness to help with whatever I land on her desk.

In terms of the research on which this book draws I am grateful to Professor Alison Liebling who supervised my PhD research. I thank her for sharing her expertise and knowledge on prison research. Her experience of empirically based research in difficult settings is an invaluable resource that I benefitted from in numerous ways. Thanks also to Linda Durie for her wonderful support and assistance with the transcripts and to Mary Gower and Stuart Stone at the Radzinowicz Library for their expertise and constant encouragement.

I am grateful also to the Directorate of High Security, which commissioned the Prisoners' Experiences and Quality of Life in Dispersal Prisons project, and to the steering group that consulted on it. I would also like to thank the nine members of staff who worked on this project with me. I hope your experiences of the research process were rewarding. It is unfortunate that there was no way to continue what we started.

I also extend my immense gratitude to the prisoners, discipline and civilian staff, governors and senior managers who contributed to this research in both direct and indirect ways. I am grateful to senior managers in the Directorate of High Security for grating access to undertake the research and I would like to thank every individual who gave up their time for an interview, informal chat or to help facilitate the research in other ways. I can appreciate how difficult it must have been for my liaison officers and other members of staff to try to accommodate a civilian (female) outsider on top of already very demanding and difficult working lives. I am in your debt. Likewise, I am grateful for the welcoming openness that was extended to me by the men in custody who assisted with this research. Thank you for allowing me to hang around your domestic spaces, for speaking to me frankly about your circumstances and for sharing your considerable wisdom with me. I tried to remain mindful and respectful of the fact that I was sometimes occupying what were generally 'private' places. I hope that my presence was not experienced as intrusive or voyeuristic. This book is for you. I hope you think it was worth it.

I want to thank all those who provided comment on early drafts, read full drafts, and engaged in discussion and debate with me as I was thinking through the ideas in this book. Thanks to Janet Newman, John Clarke, Ian Loader and Caroline Lanskey for early feedback and discussions on particular chapters and ideas. I am most indebted to those who read the full manuscript or substantial sections of it: Reece Walters, Joel Harvey, Beccah Gibson, Joe Sim, Anne Brunton, John Muncie and Rod Earle. Your comments were incredibly helpful. Any errors, half-baked arguments or examples of faulty reasoning that still remain are, of course, my responsibility alone.

Thanks very much to Philippa Grand at Palgrave for accepting the proposal for this book and to the anonymous reviewers for your helpful comments. Thanks also to the editors, Andrew James and Ellie Shillito, who helped with the process. I am extremely grateful to Janet MacMillan for guiding me through the copy-editing process and for being so careful and considerate in her comments and corrections.

Finally, I want to thank my family and closest friends for their continued support and encouragement, which also often included feeding me and looking after me in other ways as I worked my way through both the research and the writing process: Frank and Florence, Dan and Jeannie, Donna and Ken, Joel and Dan, Beccah and Rob, Tara, Helen, Mary, Stuart, Anne, Abi and Andy.