MORGAN LE FAY, SHAPESHIFTER

ARTHURIAN AND COURTLY CULTURES

Arthurian and Courtly Cultures explores this dynamic field through the great variety of literary and cultural expression inspired by the lore of King Arthur, the Round Table, and the Grail. In forms that range from medieval chronicles to popular films, from chivalric romances to contemporary comics, from magic realism to feminist fantasy—and from the sixth through the twenty-first centuries—few literary subjects provide such fertile ground for cultural elaboration. Including works in literary criticism, cultural studies, and history, Arthurian and Courtly Cultures highlights the most significant new scholarship in Arthurian Studies.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I have been working on this topic for so long that my family and friends have finally given up asking if I'm sick of Morgan le Fay yet, and so over the years I have been aided by far more people than I can properly thank here. I have been deeply fortunate to have support at every turn, and I hope all those who go unnamed know of my appreciation. I am especially thankful to the students who entered into my enthusiasm for Arthurian literature and to the colleagues who encouraged and enabled my work on Morgan, particularly Macauley Henges for her thoughts on my earliest analyses, Theresa Vann for the summer research fellowship at the Hill Monastic Manuscript Library at Saint John's University, Mary Morse for her guidance on the work that would become the foundation for the first chapter, Jana Schulman, Jil Larson, Gwen Tarbox, and Sister Susan Rieke for thoughtful comments and assistance of various kinds, and Eve Salisbury for her extremely patient and careful reading and advice.

My deepest and most heartfelt gratitude goes to my family. I want to thank my husband Chris Carlson for his support, sacrifices, and silliness. This book is in memory of my mother Jeanne, and dedicated to my father Dave, who always knows when I need to hear "go for the gold."
