Series Editors: Andrew Hoskins and John Sutton

International Advisory Board: Steven Brown, University of Leicester, UK, Mary Carruthers, New York University, USA, Paul Connerton, University of Cambridge, UK, Astrid Erll, University of Wuppertal, Germany, Robyn Fivush, Emory University, USA, Tilmann Habermas, University of Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Jeffrey Olick, University of Virginia, USA, Susannah Radstone, University of East London, UK, Ann Rigney, Utrecht University, Netherlands.

The nascent field of Memory Studies emerges from contemporary trends that include a shift from concern with historical knowledge of events to that of memory, from 'what we know' to 'how we remember it'; changes in generational memory; the rapid advance of technologies of memory; panics over declining powers of memory, which mirror our fascination with the possibilities of memory enhancement; and the development of trauma narratives in reshaping the past.

These factors have contributed to an intensification of public discourses on our past over the last thirty years. Technological, political, interpersonal, social and cultural shifts affect what, how and why people and societies remember and forget. This groundbreaking series tackles questions such as: What is 'memory' under these conditions? What are its prospects, and also the prospects for its interdisciplinary and systematic study? What are the conceptual, theoretical and methodological tools for its investigation and illumination?

Acknowledgements

We would like to thank a number of people and institutions who have been important in the production of this volume. First of all we would like to acknowledge the support of our respective institutions, King's College London and the University of Haifa, for our research. Anna Reading would also like to acknowledge the support of the School of Arts and Humanities at the University of Western Sydney where she was employed in the initial stages of editing this collection.

Anna Reading has benefited greatly from many conversations over the years with ethical colleagues in academia and those she has worked and conversed with in various international and local activist movements over three decades, including the Greenham Common Women's Peace Camp, the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, Third World First, York Rape Crisis, the Parramatta Female Factory Precinct Memory Project and Save Lewisham Hospital. Many people have contributed to her thinking and approach to the subject. She is especially indebted to the inspirational support of friends Charlotte Jones, Sarah Kent, Vincent O'Connell, Verity Williams and the late Jill Dimmock, as well as her Friends at Forest Hill Quaker Meeting, London and at the Quakers of the Blue Mountains, Sydney. She could not have produced this volume without the love, political insights and support of her partner, Colin B. Harvey and the piercing sense of justice of her two children, Zak Harvey-Reading and Aphra Harvey-Reading.

Tamar Katriel would like to acknowledge the invaluable insights and inspiration she has received over the years from colleagues and political friends in various activist groups that persist in their work for peace and justice in Israel/Palestine against all odds, including Women in Black, Ta'ayush, The Women's Coalition for Just Peace, the Olive Tree Coalition, Breaking the Silence and the Haifa feminist centre Isha l'Isha. She is indebted to the faculty and student network Forum Smol at her University, whose engagements insert a politics of hope into campus life, and to the students who contributed their insights to her seminar on Communication and Activism in which the legacy of nonviolent struggle was explored. The Rachel Corey Foundation stands out as an impressive example of a commemorative project designed to uphold that legacy. As she joins them in remembering Rachel, she is grateful to Cindy and Craig Corey for their generosity of spirit, their tenacity and their friendship. Finally, her special thanks go to Jacob, Guy and Irit Katriel, for their unfailing support and long-time, unsettling activism.

Our heartfelt thanks go to all of the contributors to this book for their patience and endurance of what has been a long project to bring together. Their contributions have been thought-provoking and stimulating. Finally, we are grateful to Felicity Plester, Sneha Kamat Bhavnani and staff at Palgrave Macmillan for facilitating the production of this book.

Notes on Contributors

Michelle Caswell is Assistant Professor of Archival Studies in the Department of Information Studies at the University of California Los Angeles. She is the author of Archiving the Unspeakable: Silence, Memory and the Photographic Record in Cambodia (2014). She is also the co-founder of the South Asian American Digital Archive (<http://www.saadigitalarchive.org>), an online repository that documents and provides access to the diverse stories of South Asian Americans.

Red Chidgey is Lecturer in Gender and Media in the Department of Culture, Media and Creative Industries at King's College London. Her research interests include the affective afterlives of social movements, digital archives and the politics of feminist memory. She recently published on DIY feminisms and cultural citizenship practices in DIY Citizenship: Critical Making and Social Media (2014) and is currently working on her first monograph on remembering feminism in digital times.

Hart Cohen is Associate Professor, and Director of Research at the School of Humanities & Communication Arts, and Member at the Institute for Culture and Society, University of Western Sydney, Australia. He co-authored (with Juan Salazar and Iqbal Barkat) Screen Media Arts: An Introduction to Concepts and Practices (2009), is a founding editor of Global Media Journal/Australian Edition (<http://www.hca.uws.edu.au/gmjau/>) and is the chief investigator (ARC): Digital Archives and Discoverability: Innovating Access to the Strehlow Collection.

Irit Dekel is Research Fellow at the Department of Social Sciences, Humboldt University of Berlin and Faculty Member of Bard College Berlin. Her book Mediation at the Holocaust Memorial in Berlin was published by Palgrave Macmillan Memory Studies series in 2013. She studies memory politics in Germany and Israel; minorities and memory discourse in Germany; the representation and experience of historical narratives in home historical museums; media; and museums.

Bernhard Forchtner is Marie Curie Fellow at the Institute of Social Sciences, Humboldt-University of Berlin, working on far-right discourses on the environment (Project Number 327595). He obtained his doctoral degree from the Department of Sociology and the Department of Linguistics and English Language at Lancaster University (UK) and has published in the field of memory studies, at the interface of sociological theory and critical discourse analysis, and on prejudice and discrimination.

Yifat Gutman has a PhD in Sociology from the New School for Social Research and is currently Postdoctoral Fellow in the Davis and Truman Institutes at Hebrew University. A recipient of the Dan David Scholarship for Young Researchers, she has researched peace activism and memory politics in and after conflict. She has published articles in such journals as Parallax and Memory Studies, among others, and co-edited with Adam D. Brown and Amy Sodaro Memory and the Future: Transnational Politics, Ethics and Society (2010).

Colin B. Harvey is Senior Lecturer in Transmedia Industries and Digital Cultures, at King's College, University of London. He is a fiction writer, journalist and academic specializing in transmedia storytelling. He is the winner of the first SFX Pulp Idol award in 2006, and since then has contributed to the Doctor Who and Highlander spin-off ranges produced by the British company 'Big Finish' under license from the BBC and MGM respectively. He also writes original fiction. Colin has written numerous design proposals for 'Team Soho', Sony's London-based video game prototyping department, as well as contributing to the British video gaming press. He is the author of Grand Theft Auto: Motion-Emotion (2005) and has written academic articles on Battlestar Galactica, Doctor Who, Sherlock and Neil Gaiman. Colin's PhD, conferred in 2009, explores the interrelationship of storytelling and playing in video game media using ideas of affect and memory.

Tamar Katriel is Professor in Communication and Education at the University of Haifa, specializing in the Ethnography of Communication. She is the author of Talking Straight: Dugri Speech in Israeli Sabra Culture (1986), Communal Webs: Communication and Culture in Contemporary Israel (1991), Performing the Past: A Study of Israeli Settlement Museums (1997) and Dialogic Moments: From Soul Talks to Talk Radio in Israeli Culture (2004), and a range of articles in journals and books.

Christoffer Kølvrå is Associate Professor at Section of European Studies, Department of Culture and Society, Aarhus University, Denmark. His research interests are oriented towards the construction of European identity, theories of ideology and issues of political affect and mobilization. His recent publications include: 'Ideology and the crowd' (2013) in Distinktion: Scandinavian Journal of Social Theory; 'Narrating a “new Europe”: From “bitter past” to self-righteousness?” (2012) (with Bernhard Forchtner) in Discourse and Society, and Imagining Europe as a Global Player – The Ideological Construction of a new European Identity within the EU (2012).

Susan C. Pearce is Associate Professor of Sociology at East Carolina University in North Carolina. She conducts research on social movements, collective memory, ethnicity, migration and gender. She is co-author of Immigration and Women: Understanding the American Experience (2011) and co-editor of Reformulations: Markets, Policy, and Identities in Central and Eastern Europe (2000) and Mosaics of Change: The First Decade of Life in the New Eastern Europe (2000). Her PhD is from the New School for Social Research.

Anna Reading is Professor of Cultural and Creative Industries and is Head of the Department of Culture, Media and Creative Industries at King's College, University of London, UK. She is the author and editor of five books including Polish Women, Solidarity and Feminism (1992), The Social Inheritance of the Holocaust: Gender, Culture and Memory (2002) and Save as ... Digital Memories (2009), and is the editor of Media, Culture and Society. She has been an activist in the peace and feminist movements for over 30 years.

Ornit Shani is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Asian Studies at the University of Haifa. She is the author of Communalism, Caste and Hindu Nationalism: The Violence in Gujarat (2007). Her current research focuses on the modern history of democracy and citizenship in India. Her forthcoming book is The Making of India's Democracy: Universal Franchise and Citizenship in the World's Largest Democracy.

David Torell is a PhD student at King's College London. His research project utilizes the Russell Tribunal and the American war in Vietnam as a stepping stone for research on cultural and collective memory and the forgetting practices inherent to colonialism, genocide, media memory, war resistance and the responsibility of intellectuals. David has also worked as a teacher, photographer and translator.
