

Studies in the Psychosocial

Series editors
Stephen Frosh
Dept of Psychosocial Studies
Birkbeck, University of London
London, UK

Peter Redman
Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences
The Open University
Milton Keynes, UK

Wendy Hollway
Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences
The Open University
Milton Keynes, UK

Studies in the Psychosocial seeks to investigate the ways in which psychic and social processes demand to be understood as always implicated in each other, as mutually constitutive, co-produced, or abstracted levels of a single dialectical process. As such it can be understood as an interdisciplinary field in search of transdisciplinary objects of knowledge. Studies in the Psychosocial is also distinguished by its emphasis on affect, the irrational and unconscious processes, often, but not necessarily, understood psychoanalytically. Studies in the Psychosocial aims to foster the development of this field by publishing high quality and innovative monographs and edited collections. The series welcomes submissions from a range of theoretical perspectives and disciplinary orientations, including sociology, social and critical psychology, political science, post-colonial studies, feminist studies, queer studies, management and organization studies, cultural and media studies and psychoanalysis. However, in keeping with the inter- or transdisciplinary character of psychosocial analysis, books in the series will generally pass beyond their points of origin to generate concepts, understandings and forms of investigation that are distinctively psychosocial in character.

More information about this series at <http://www.palgrave.com/gp/series/14464>

Paul Stenner

Liminality and Experience

A Transdisciplinary Approach to the Psychosocial

palgrave
macmillan

Paul Stenner
School of Psychology
The Open University
Milton Keynes, UK

Studies in the Psychosocial

ISBN 978-1-137-27210-2

ISBN 978-1-137-27211-9 (eBook)

<https://doi.org/10.1057/978-1-137-27211-9>

Library of Congress Control Number: 2018930131

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2017

The author(s) has/have asserted their right(s) to be identified as the author(s) of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover illustration: EyeEm / Alamy Stock

Printed on acid-free paper

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by Springer Nature

The registered company is Macmillan Publishers Ltd.

The registered company address is: The Campus, 4 Crinan Street, London, N1 9XW, United Kingdom

Acknowledgements

Liminality and Experience has been long in the making. Many people, from close to home to far afield, have helped me to write it, though the failings are mine alone. Foremost, I wish to thank my immediate family and especially Monica Greco. She has been a constant source of insight and has patiently guided me from proposal to completion, editing my worst excesses and encouraging clarity. Ezra and Anna Greco Stenner have shown me dreams, dramas and gloves full of bullet-ants. Both grew into teenagers and young adults while I was busy writing. I thank Grace Jackson and Joanna O'Neill and the rest of the team at Palgrave Macmillan for having the confidence to be patient as the years ticked by. I thank Rose Capdevila for her support and for lending me the solitude of her flat in Pineda, and Martin Capdevila for interrupting that solitude with fried fish, fine company and talk of fables. I thank Joan Pujol, Marisela Montenegro and Emeri Reig Bolaño for an unforgettable evening/morning in Barcelona which gave the main thesis of the book a new vitality. This is not to neglect Jasper Chalcraft and Monica Sassatelli for many evenings of intellectual free-association that fuelled the enthusiasm without which this project might have stalled. I thank the European Science Foundation for funding Monica Greco, Johanna Motzkau, Megan Clinch and myself to assemble a fantastic network of people from all over Europe to study the affective dimensions of liminal experience. Each contributor to this liminal hotspots network has a share in the ideas presented here.

I have had the pleasure of presenting versions of this work in various places, and have benefited enormously from intense discussions with colleagues and students, notably in Puebla (special thanks to Ali Lara and Eduardo Rodriguez Villegas), Bratislava (special thanks to Gabriel Bianchi and Miro Popper), Bochum (special thanks to Estrid Sørensen and Jürgen Straub), Vienna (special thanks to Elisabeth Mixa), Lausanne (special thanks to Marie Santiago-Delefosse, Agnieszka Soltysik and Nancy Armstrong), Copenhagen (special thanks to Morten Nissen, Jette Kofoed, Hanne Knudsen and Niels Åkerstrøm Andersen), Medellín (special thanks to Juan Carlos Arboleda Ariza and Milton Danilo Morales Herrera), Belfast (special thanks to Eugene MacNamee), Edinburgh (special thanks to Graeme Laurie) and London (special thanks to Kath Woodward and Jef Huysmans). Those who adventure into transdisciplinary territory need support from experts in many fields. The scope and potential of liminality as a core concept became clear to me thanks to Árpád Szakolczai, Agnes Horvath and Bjørn Thomassen. Polina Batanova has given wise council on my forays into the sacred. My grasp of process thought has been enhanced by discussions through day and night with philosophers and neuroscientists in Fontarèches, and at meetings of the International Process Network and the Association for Process Thought. I have been greatly enriched by my involvement with the International Society for Theoretical Psychology, which contains more than its fair share of transdisciplinary, and I have particular debts to Steve Brown, Paula Reavey, John Cromby, Thomas Slunecko and Tania Zittoun. Closer to home, I thank my colleagues at the Open University, particularly the Social Psychology Research Group, and my past students, especially Eduardo Moreno, who shared my reading experience of Victor Turner (gently supported by Katherine Johnson and Matt Adams) and Simon Watts (who knows the liminality of love). Even closer, thanks to Derek and Ann Stenner for their art of life.

October 2017
Hove

Paul Stenner

Contents

1	Introduction: Throwing Psychosocial Studies in at the Deep End	1
2	This Is Not ... The Truth: On Fabulation	37
3	This Is Not ... Food: On Food for Thought	71
4	This Is Not ... a Pipe: On the Complexity of Experience	111
5	This Is Not ... a Shock: On the Passage Between Multiple Worlds	151
6	This Is Not ... a Turn to Affect: Feeling Between Ontology and Anthropology	197

7 Conclusion	253
---------------------	------------

Author Index	287
---------------------	------------

Subject Index	291
----------------------	------------

List of Figures

Image 4.1	Magritte's famous painting Ceci n'est pas une pipe , also called The treachery of images	112
Fig. 5.1	The form of Schutz's distinction between daily life and several other 'worlds'	153