

Studies in Diplomacy and International Relations

General Editors: Donna Lee, Senior Lecturer in International Organisations and International Political Economy, University of Birmingham, UK and Paul Sharp, Professor of Political Science and Director of the Alworth Institute for International Studies at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, USA

The series was launched as Studies in Diplomacy in 1994 under the general editorship of G.R. Berridge. Its purpose is to encourage original scholarship on all aspects of the theory and practice of diplomacy. The new editors assumed their duties in 2003 with a mandate to maintain this focus while also publishing research which demonstrates the importance of diplomacy to contemporary international relations more broadly conceived.

Titles include:

G. R. Berridge (editor)

DIPLOMATIC CLASSICS

Selected Texts from Comynnes to Vattel

G. R. Berridge, Maurice Keens-Soper and T. G. Otte

DIPLOMATIC THEORY FROM MACHIAVELLI TO KISSINGER

Herman J. Cohen

INTERVENING IN AFRICA

Superpower Peacemaking in a Troubled Continent

Costas M. Constantinou and James Der Derian (editors)

SUSTAINABLE DIPLOMACIES

Andrew F. Cooper (editor)

NICHE DIPLOMACY

Middle Powers after the Cold War

Andrew F. Cooper, Brian Hocking and William Maley (editors)

GLOBAL GOVERNANCE AND DIPLOMACY

Worlds Apart?

Mai'a K. Davis Cross

THE EUROPEAN DIPLOMATIC CORPS

Diplomats and International Cooperation from Westphalia to Maastricht

David H. Dunn (editor)

DIPLOMACY AT THE HIGHEST LEVEL

The Evolution of International Summitry

Brian Hocking (editor)

FOREIGN MINISTRIES

Change and Adaptation

Brian Hocking and David Spence (editors)

FOREIGN MINISTRIES IN THE EUROPEAN UNION

Integrating Diplomats

Michael Hughes

DIPLOMACY BEFORE THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION

Britain, Russia and the Old Diplomacy, 1894–1917

Gaynor Johnson

THE BERLIN EMBASSY OF LORD D'ABERNON, 1920–1926

Christer Jönsson and Martin Hall

ESSENCE OF DIPLOMACY

Donna Lee

MIDDLE POWERS & COMMERCIAL DIPLOMACY

British Influence at the Kennedy Trade Round

Donna Lee, Ian Taylor and Paul D. Williams (editors)
THE NEW MULTILATERALISM IN SOUTH AFRICAN DIPLOMACY

Mario Liverani
INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS IN THE ANCIENT NEAR EAST, 1600–1100 BC

Jan Melissen (editor)
INNOVATION IN DIPLOMATIC PRACTICE
THE NEW PUBLIC DIPLOMACY
Soft Power in International Relations

Peter Neville
APPEASING HITLER
The Diplomacy of Sir Nevile Henderson, 1937–39

M. J. Peterson
RECOGNITION OF GOVERNMENTS
Legal Doctrine and State Practice, 1815–1995

Gary D. Rawnsley
RADIO DIPLOMACY AND PROPAGANDA
The BBC and VOA in International Politics, 1956–64
TAIWAN'S INFORMAL DIPLOMACY AND PROPAGANDA

Karl W. Schweizer and Paul Sharp (editors)
THE INTERNATIONAL THOUGHT OF HERBERT BUTTERFIELD

Paul Sharp and Geoffrey Wiseman (editors)
THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS AS AN INSTITUTION OF INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY

Taryn Shepperd
SINO-US RELATIONS AND THE ROLE OF EMOTION IN STATE ACTION
Understanding Post-Cold War Crisis Interactions

Ronald A. Walker
MULTILATERAL CONFERENCES
Purposeful International Negotiation

Andrew J. Williams
FRANCE, BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY 1900–1940
A Reappraisal

A. Nuri Yurdusev (editor)
OTTOMAN DIPLOMACY
Conventional or Unconventional?

R.S. Zaharna
BATTLES TO BRIDGES
US Strategic Communication and Public Diplomacy after 9/11

Studies in Diplomacy and International Relations
Series Standing Order ISBN 978-0-333-71495-9
(outside North America only)

You can receive future titles in this series as they are published by placing a standing order. Please contact your bookseller or, in case of difficulty, write to us at the address below with your name and address, the title of the series and the ISBN quoted above.

Customer Services Department, Macmillan Distribution Ltd, Houndmills, Basingstoke,
Hampshire RG21 6XS, England

France, Britain and the United States in the Twentieth Century 1900–1940

A Reappraisal

Andrew J. Williams

School of International Relations, University of St Andrews, UK

palgrave
macmillan

© Andrew J. Williams 2014

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2014 978-0-230-28230-8

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No portion of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, Saffron House, 6–10 Kirby Street, London EC1N 8TS.

Any person who does any unauthorized act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted his right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

First published 2014 by
PALGRAVE MACMILLAN

Palgrave Macmillan in the UK is an imprint of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan in the US is a division of St Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-32825-3 ISBN 978-1-137-31545-8 (eBook)
DOI 10.1057/9781137315458

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources. Logging, pulping and manufacturing processes are expected to conform to the environmental regulations of the country of origin.

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

A catalog record for this book is available from the Library of Congress.

Typeset by MPS Limited, Chennai, India.

*For My Mum
Jane Williams
18 October 1922–25 August 2013*

This page intentionally left blank

Contents

Acknowledgements	viii
Introduction – The Approach Taken: Why Britain, France and the United States?	1
1 The Anglo-Saxons and the French: The Build-up to the First World War	23
2 The Allies During the First World War and Paris Peace Conference	56
3 Difficult Relations in the 1920s – of Reparations, Debts and ‘Rumo(u)rs of War’	94
4 France, Britain and the United States in the 1930s until the Fall of France	133
5 Conclusion: Britain, France and the United States in 1940	172
Notes	194
Bibliography	230
Index	250

Acknowledgements

Of the many people who have helped me in the writing of this book, and indeed the next volume, I would in particular like to thank David Woolner, Resident Historian of the Roosevelt Institute at the Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt Presidential Library in Hyde Park, New York, as well as his staff. David has been both a good friend over many years and a great supporter of this project. He encouraged me to apply for the Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr. Historical Fellowship, which made my several trips to Hyde Park possible. The Fellowship also helped greatly in my stays in New York City, where I consulted papers in the Butler Library of Columbia University. In New York I also owe a great personal debt to Neil and Judy Garrecht Williams who have let me abuse their hospitality on many occasions over many years. In the Washington area Chris and Lois Mitchell have likewise always extended their hospitality. In Paris, I have nearly always stayed with Antoinette and John Groom in their delightful flat overlooking the Cimetière de Montparnasse, possibly my favourite place in my favourite city. I cannot thank any of them enough.

Among other great American libraries, the Butler Library at Columbia not only helped me with what I asked for but also helped me in ways I could not have imagined, as with my discovery of the Butler–Bergson Correspondence. In Washington both the Library of Congress and the National Archives have helped smooth my path on a great number of occasions. Library staff at the University of Princeton (Seeley Mudd Library) were extremely nice to me on both my visits there. In France, I have always been given a generous welcome by the guardians of the Archives Diplomatiques of the French Foreign Ministry, both in its old site on the Quai d'Orsay and in its new home north of Paris at La Courneuve. In Britain I would like again to thank not only the staff of the National Archives at Kew, the British Library and the British Library of Political and Economics at the London School of Economics, but also those of the Bodleian Library in Oxford and those in Churchill College and King's College, Cambridge. This is in addition to thanking staff of quite a few other institutions that I have consulted but not quoted from here, like the National Archives of Scotland in Edinburgh and Cambridge University Library. Once again I would like to thank the family of the present Lord John Bradbury for letting me consult his private papers. I still hope that someone will one day write a biography of the first Lord Bradbury, one of the greatest British public servants of the twentieth century.

Both the Institut d'Etudes Politiques in Paris (Sciences Po) and the institution of the same name in Lille have helped my research for this book (as well as for previous ones) immensely by giving me posts as professeur invité in 1995 and 2006 (Paris) and 2009–13 (Lille). In particular I have been helped more than I can say by Bertrand Badie and Marie-Claude Smouts (and their delightful partners Blandine and Henri) in Paris and Jean-Louis Thiébault and Charles Tenenbaum in Lille. The reception of one of my chapters in Lille in early 2013 persuaded me a French audience might not think I was entirely mad and was an invaluable boost to my morale, as was the first proper outing of the idea for this book at a seminar organized at the University of Paris VII by Melanie Torrent and Claire Sanderson in 2008. As a result of their collective kindness, my affection for France goes far beyond being a Francophile. Far from being a model of decline, France strikes me as a country that ‘Anglo-Saxons’ could do much to emulate. In truth the United Kingdom, the United States and France have far more in common than they will ever admit; we are a family of nations, and like all families we quarrel about small things while being seemingly blind to those great things which we have created together.

I have aired various versions of chapters of this book at meetings at various universities. The best of these were at: the University of Exeter, hosted by Martin Thomas and Andrew Thompson; at the University of Hull, hosted by Justin Morris, Caroline Kennedy-Pipe and Hannes Artens; and at the University of London (SOAS), hosted by Dan Plesch and Simon Rofe. Comments by an anonymous reviewer for Palgrave Macmillan were not only very encouraging but also very helpful in tightening up my focus. My thanks to all of you at Palgrave Macmillan, and in particular Harriet Barker and Ellie Davey-Corrigan for your encouragement and for making this a pretty simple process, as well as to Donna Lee, Series Editor, for your faith in me throughout.

On a personal level, as well as the above-mentioned, the following people have been extremely helpful in helping me think about this book. In alphabetical order they are: Luke Ashworth, Terry Barringer, Richard Davis, Ian Hall, Peter Jackson, Gaynor Johnson, Ken Kennard, Roger Mac Ginty, Oliver Richmond and Maia Woolner. Corridor and seminar discussions with many colleagues and students at the Universities of Kent and St Andrews have had a great effect on me over the years. If I have forgotten anyone, my apologies.

I would also like to thank Taylor and Francis for giving me copyright clearance to use small sections of articles I have published in their journals: ‘Norman Angell and his French Contemporaries, 1900–1914’, Diplomacy and Statecraft, Vol. 21, No. 4, December 2010, pp. 574–592; ‘Waiting for Monsieur Bergson: Nicholas Murray Butler, James T. Shotwell and the French Sage’, Diplomacy and Statecraft, Vol. 23, No. 2, June 2012, pp. 236–253; and ‘Sir John Bradbury and the Reparations Commission, 1920–1925’, Diplomacy and Statecraft, Vol. 13, No. 3, September 2002, pp. 81–102.

I am also grateful to Peter Lang Publishing and the editors for the re-use of certain passages of my chapter: 'Menage a Trois? Britain, France and the United States, 1900–1914. International Relations and What Might Have Been Different' in: Claire Sanderson and Melanie Torrent (eds) Challenges to British Power Status: Foreign Policy and Diplomacy in the 20th Century (Brussels and Oxford: PIE Peter Lang, 2013), pp. 59–78.

None of this would have been possible without the constant love and support of my wife Jane, my children Nicholas and Rebecca, and my Mum and Dad. Alas my Dad now has Alzheimer's so I cannot ask him to read this book, as he did nearly all my previous ones. My Mum died on 25 August 2013, just after I sent the first draft to the publisher. I have dedicated the book to her memory.