PALGRAVE STUDIES IN THE HISTORY OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

James Rodger Fleming (Colby College) and Roger D. Launius (National Air and Space Museum), Series Editors

This series presents original, high-quality, and accessible works at the cutting edge of scholarship within the history of science and technology. Books in the series aim to disseminate new knowledge and new perspectives about the history of science and technology, enhance and extend education, foster public understanding, and enrich cultural life. Collectively, these books will break down conventional lines of demarcation by incorporating historical perspectives into issues of current and ongoing concern, offering international and global perspectives on a variety of issues, and bridging the gap between historians and practicing scientists. In this way they not only advance scholarly conversation within and across traditional disciplines but also help define new areas of intellectual endeavor.

Published by Palgrave Macmillan:

Continental Defense in the Eisenhower Era: Nuclear Antiaircraft Arms and the Cold War

By Christopher J. Bright

Confronting the Climate: British Airs and the Making of Environmental Medicine

By Vladimir Janković

Globalizing Polar Science: Reconsidering the International Polar and Geophysical Years

Edited by Roger D. Launius, James Rodger Fleming, and David H. DeVorkin

Eugenics and the Nature-Nurture Debate in the Twentieth Century

By Aaron Gillette

John F. Kennedy and the Race to the Moon

By John M. Logsdon

A Vision of Modern Science: John Tyndall and the Role of the Scientist in Victorian Culture

By Ursula DeYoung

Searching for Sasquatch: Crackpots, Eggheads, and Cryptozoology

By Brian Regal

Inventing the American Astronaut

By Matthew H. Hersch

The Nuclear Age in Popular Media: A Transnational History

Edited by Dick van Lente

Exploring the Solar System: The History and Science of Planetary Exploration
Edited by Roger D. Launius

The Sociable Sciences: Darwin and His Contemporaries in Chile
By Patience A. Schell

The First Atomic Age: Scientists, Radiations, and the American Public, 1895–1945
By Matthew Lavine

NASA in the World: Fifty Years of International Collaboration in Space
By John Krige, Angelina Long Callahan, and Ashok Maharaj

Empire and Science in the Making: Dutch Colonial Scholarship in Comparative Global Perspective, 1760–1830
Edited by Peter Boomgaard

Anglo-American Connections in Japanese Chemistry: The Lab as Contact Zone
By Yoshiyuki Kikuchi

Eismitte in the Scientific Imagination: Knowledge and Politics at the Center of Greenland
By Janet Martin-Nielsen

Empire and Science in the Making

Dutch Colonial Scholarship in Comparative Global Perspective,
1760–1830

Edited by Peter Boomgaard

palgrave
macmillan

EMPIRE AND SCIENCE IN THE MAKING

Copyright © Peter Boomgaard, 2013.

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2013 978-1-137-33401-5

All rights reserved.

First published in 2013 by

PALGRAVE MACMILLAN®

in the United States—a division of St. Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Where this book is distributed in the UK, Europe and the rest of the world, this is by Palgrave Macmillan, a division of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-46251-3 ISBN 978-1-137-33402-2 (eBook)

DOI 10.1057/9781137334022

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Empire and science in the making : Dutch colonial scholarship in comparative global perspective, 1760–1830 / edited by Peter Boomgaard.

pages cm.—(Palgrave studies in the history of science and technology)
Includes bibliographical references.

1. Science—Netherlands—Colonies—History—18th century.
2. Science—Netherlands—Colonies—History—19th century.
3. Learning and scholarship—Netherlands—Colonies—History—18th century.
4. Learning and scholarship—Netherlands—Colonies—History—19th century.
5. Imperialism—Social aspects—History—18th century.
6. Imperialism—Social aspects—History—19th century.
7. Netherlands—Colonies—Intellectual life.
8. Great Britain—Colonies—Intellectual life.
9. Spain—Colonies—Intellectual life.
10. Russia—Colonies—Intellectual life.
- I. Boomgaard, P., 1946–

Q127.N2E56 2013

509.171'249209033—dc23

2013035038

A catalogue record of the book is available from the British Library.

Design by Newgen Knowledge Works (P) Ltd., Chennai, India.

First edition: October 2013

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

This book is dedicated to my wife, Raquel Reyes, and my children, Pim, Gaia, and Cosmo

This page intentionally left blank

Contents

Notes on Contributors	ix
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction
From the Mundane to the Sublime: Science, Empire, and the Enlightenment (1760s–1820s)	1
Peter Boomgaard
Chapter 1
Science and the Colonial War-State: British India, 1790–1820	39
David Arnold
Chapter 2
Collecting and the Pursuit of Scientific Accuracy: The Malaspina Expedition in the Philippines, 1792	63
Raquel A. G. Reyes
Chapter 3
Empire without Science? The Dutch Scholarly World and Colonial Science around 1800	89
Klaas van Berkel
Chapter 4
Why Was There No Javanese Galileo?	109
Gerry van Klinken
Chapter 5
For the Common Good: Dutch Institutions and Western Scholarship on Indonesia around 1800	135
Peter Boomgaard
Chapter 6
“A Religion That Is Extremely Easy and Unusually Light to Take On”: Dutch and English Knowledge of Islam in Southeast Asia, ca. 1595–1811	165
Michael Laffan

Chapter 7
A Moral Obligation of the Nation-State: Archaeology and Regime Change in Java and the Netherlands in the Early Nineteenth Century	185
Marieke Bloembergen and Martijn Eickhoff
Chapter 8
Meeting Point Deshima: Scholarly Communication between Japan and Europe up till around 1800	207
Peter Rietbergen
Chapter 9
Ethnographic Fieldwork in the Dutch Cape Colony at the Beginning of the Nineteenth Century: De Kaffers aan de Zuidkust van Afrika (1810) by Ludwig Alberti	231
Siegfried Huigen
Chapter 10
Intellectual Wastelands? Scholarship in and for the Dutch West Indies up to ca. 1800	253
Gert Oostindie
Index	281

Contributors

David Arnold is emeritus professor of History at the University of Warwick, UK, having previously taught at the School of Oriental and African Studies, London. A founder member of the Subaltern Studies group, he has written on the history of disease and medicine in colonial India, on crime and policing, environmental history, and the history of science. His published work includes Colonizing the Body: State Medicine and Epidemic Disease in Nineteenth-Century India (1993), Gandhi (2001), and Everyday Technology: Machines and the Making of India's Modernity (2013).

Klaas van Berkel is Rudolf Agricola professor of History at the University of Groningen, the Netherlands. He has published books on the history of science and the universities in the Netherlands and its colonies from 1500 to the present, including a two-volume history of the Royal Netherlands Academy of Arts and Sciences (2008–2011). His most recent book is Isaac Beeckman on Matter and Motion: Mechanical Philosophy in the Making (2013).

Marieke Bloembergen (PhD University of Amsterdam, 2001) is a cultural historian specialized in Dutch and Indonesian colonial and postcolonial history. She works as senior researcher at the Royal Netherlands Institute of Southeast Asian and Caribbean Studies in Leiden (KITLV). As a postdoctoral researcher at Utrecht University, she completed a monograph on policing and perceptions of security in the Dutch East Indies (published in 2009, Indonesian translation in 2011). Currently she is finishing, together with Martijn Eickhoff, a research project on archaeology and heritage formation in colonial and postcolonial Indonesia, in the context of the NWO-funded research project “Sites, Bodies and Stories.”

Peter Boomgaard is senior researcher at KITLV, Leiden, professor (emeritus) of History, University of Amsterdam, and, during 2012/13, fellow at the Rachel Carson Center, Munich. Among his sole-authored books are Frontiers of Fear: Tigers and People in the Malay World, 1600–1950 (2001), and Southeast Asia: An Environmental History

(2007). He has (co)edited many volumes, including Globalization, Environmental Change, and Social History (2010), and “Long-Term Changes in Land-Tenure Arrangements in Pre-Modern and Early-Modern Southeast Asia” (Journal of the Economic and Social History of the Orient, Vol. 54, 2011).

Martijn Eickhoff (PhD University of Amsterdam, 2003) is a cultural historian who specializes in the historical culture of dictatorial and colonial regimes, with a specific interest in archaeological practices. He works as senior researcher at NIOD—Institute for War, Holocaust, and Genocide Studies in Amsterdam and is lecturer at the Radboud University Nijmegen, the Netherlands. In the context of the NWO-funded “Sites, Bodies and Stories” research project and in collaboration with Marieke Bloembergen, he is currently conducting a project on colonial and postcolonial archaeology and heritage formation in Indonesia. Martijn Eickhoff has also published widely on scholarly research in times of war and regime change.

Siegfried Huigen is associate professor of Dutch Literature and Cultural History at the University of Stellenbosch, in South Africa, and university professor at the Uniwersytet Wrocławski, in Poland. His research interests are early modern travel writing and the history of colonial science and scholarship. He is the author of De weg naar Monomotapa (1996) and Knowledge and Colonialism; Eighteenth-century Travellers in South Africa (2007 and 2009), and (co)editor of several books on South African politics of memory and the history of colonial knowledge.

Gerry van Klinken is senior researcher at the KITLV and professor of Southeast Asian history at the University of Amsterdam. His recent sole-authored books include The Making of Middle Indonesia (in press) and Communal violence and Democratization in Indonesia (2007). He now coordinates the multidisciplinary research project “Elite Network Shifts” (computational network analysis on electronic news archives), and researches the history of citizenship practices in Indonesia. He also has a master’s degree in geophysics, and has taught physics at universities in Malaysia and Indonesia for 10 years.

Michael Laffan (PhD Sydney University, 2001) is professor of History at Princeton University, where he teaches on Southeast Asian Islam and Indian Ocean connections. He is the author of Islamic Nationhood and Colonial Indonesia (2003) and, more recently, the Makings of Indonesian Islam (2011). His current project traces the movements and legacies of exiles ranging from Cairo and Colombo to Batavia (now Jakarta) and Cape Town.

Gert Oostindie is director of the KITLV/Royal Netherlands Institute of Southeast Asian and Caribbean Studies in Leiden and professor of Caribbean History at Leiden University. His principal areas of research have been the Caribbean and Dutch (post)colonial history in a comparative perspective. He has (co)published and edited over 25 books, including Dutch Atlantic Connections, 1680–1815 (2014), Curaçao in the Age of Revolutions, 1795–1800 (2011), Postcolonial Netherlands. Sixty-five years of Forgetting, Commemorating, Silencing (2011), and Paradise Overseas: The Dutch Caribbean; Colonialism and Its Transatlantic Legacies (2005).

Raquel A. G. Reyes is a research fellow in History at SOAS (London). She is the author of Love, Passion and Patriotism: Sexuality and the Philippine Propaganda Movement, 1882–1892 (2008) and coeditor of Sexual Diversity in Asia, c.600–1950 (2012). She writes on the history of science and medicine in Southeast Asia and is currently working on a project that traces historical interactions between science, religion, and sexual knowledge.

Peter Rietbergen (PhD Nijmegen, 1983) is professor of postmedieval cultural history at the Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands. Among his publications are De eerste landvoogd: Pieter Both (1987), Japan verwoord: Nihon door Nederlandse ogen (2003), and Europa's India, ca 1800–2000 (2007). His Geschiedenis van Nederland in Vogelvlucht (1993–2013) has gone through six revised editions, as has its English version, A Short History of the Netherlands (1993–2013). His Europe: A Cultural History (1998; rev. edition 2006) was translated into Chinese, Korean and Polish. As Nicolaas Berg he wrote a historical novel about the Dutch EIC and Japan, Dood op Deshima (2001).

This page intentionally left blank

Acknowledgments

The history of this book started in 2008, the bicentennial of the Royal Netherlands Academy of Arts and Sciences (KNAW). They let it be known there was money available for workshops with participants from afar. During, before, and after the workshop, we were very ably assisted by one of the KNAW's personnel, Martine Wagenaar.

Based on the information received, we thought that another branch of the KNAW would take care of the publication too, but when I sent in the revised versions of the papers, we got the message, after a delay of half a year, that the KNAW had scrapped the series because of cutbacks.

Luckily, Palgrave Macmillan was willing to publish the book at short notice. I dealt mainly with Chris Chappell and Sarah Whalen, who helped me with great patience to turn a manuscript into a book.

In the last stage of getting the book together, before it could go into production, I was a fellow at the Rachel Carson Center for Environment and Society, in Munich, and the center, in the person of Maeve Storey was willing to help me with the correction of the notes and bibliography.