

Palgrave Politics of Identity and Citizenship Series

Series Editors: Varun Uberoi, Brunel University, UK; Nasar Meer, University of Strathclyde, UK and Tariq Modood, University of Bristol, UK

The politics of identity and citizenship has assumed increasing importance as our polities have become significantly more culturally, ethnically and religiously diverse. Different types of scholars, including philosophers, sociologists, political scientists and historians make contributions to this field and this series showcases a variety of innovative contributions to it. Focusing on a range of different countries, and utilizing the insights of different disciplines, the series helps to illuminate an increasingly controversial area of research and titles in it will be of interest to a number of audiences including scholars, students and other interested individuals.

Acknowledgments

This book delves into the negatives of cohesion, but it could not have been written without experiencing some of its positives (although I would prefer to call these experiences friendship, support and solidarity). First of all, I am grateful to Michael Foley and Roger Scully for their encouragement and to Andrew Linklater and Derek McGhee who offered competent advice.

In its initial stages, my work on this project has been supported by a studentship at Aberystwyth University's Department of International Politics. It has been concluded with support from a Jean Monnet Fellowship at the European University Institute's Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies, and I am grateful to Anna Triandafyllidou for hosting me in Florence. My time at the University of Bristol's Centre for Ethnicity and Citizenship proved more inspiring than I could have hoped, and I wish to thank Tariq Modood for this experience and for his generosity and support.

Aleksandra Lewicki, Ranji Devadason and Anne Koch commented on draft chapters and have also been great friends. I wish to thank Jacqui Briggs and Yee Wah Foo at the University of Lincoln for their support and Tina Haux and Louisa Parks for their friendship.

Parts of Chapter 1 have been published as "'Things Fall Apart": Social Imaginaries and the Politics of Cohesion', Critical Policy Studies 2010 (4:2).

The book is dedicated to Franz, Josi and Matti who entered the stage in between its beginning and its conclusion.
