

Gender and Politics

Series editors: Johanna Kantola, Senior Lecturer in Gender Studies, University of Helsinki, Finland, and Sarah Childs, Professor of Politics and Gender, University of Bristol, UK

This timely new series publishes leading monographs and edited collections from scholars working in the disciplinary areas of politics, international relations, and public policy with specific reference to questions of gender. The series showcases cutting-edge research in Gender and Politics, publishing topical and innovative approaches to gender politics. It will include exciting work from new authors and well-known academics and will also publish high-impact writings by practitioners working in issues relating to gender and politics.

The series covers politics, international relations, and public policy, including gendered engagement with mainstream political science issues, such as political systems and policymaking, representation and participation, citizenship and identity, equality, and women's movements; gender and international relations, including feminist approaches to international institutions, political economy, and global politics; and interdisciplinary and emergent areas of study, such as masculinities studies, gender and multiculturalism, and intersectionality.

Acknowledgements

I would never have been able to conduct this research without the help of colleagues, family, and the support of my friends. I am indebted to so many individuals and organizations who have helped me throughout my academic career and am extremely fortunate to work with amazing scholars who have helped ensure my success.

I would like to thank the Thomas S. Foley Institute for Public Policy and Public Service and the Division of Governmental Studies and Services at Washington State University for providing generous support and the tools necessary to conduct this research. I was awarded the WSU-Sciences Po Research Fellowship by the Thomas S. Foley Institute, which allowed me to live in Bordeaux, France, in order to conduct interviews with gender experts living in Europe. The Division of Governmental Studies and Services provided access to Remark Web Survey Software, which allowed me to administer surveys to several individuals working with the European Union and United Nations.

I would also like to thank Amy Mazur for her guidance and support. She worked tirelessly to ensure that I had all the resources and opportunities I needed to conduct this research and spent countless hours discussing the project and providing much-needed advice. Amy has been a true mentor and friend. I am truly honored to know her, and her work and enthusiasm will continue to serve as an exemplar of the type of scholar I hope to become. I would also like to thank Nicholas Lovrich and Andrew Appleton for their enthusiasm and encouragement throughout my tenure at Washington State University.

I am indebted to many individuals who have helped me throughout this project. I would like to express my gratitude to Marila Guadagnini, who opened her home to me during my stay in Italy. I am extremely thankful for her willingness to not only host me but to offer much-needed guidance. She introduced me to the beauty of Turin, Italy, and I am forever grateful for the time spent with her and her family. Of course, this project would not have been possible without the many individuals who took time out of their busy schedules to participate in an interview or survey. I am thankful for their willingness to share their experiences and knowledge; the enthusiasm that was often expressed for this project served as a much-needed bulwark in times of doubt.

I owe my family a debt of gratitude that I will never fully be able to articulate. I would have been unable to conduct my field research without the assistance of my parents, Rod and Sandi Hoard, who have always been there for me when I most needed it. Lastly, I would never have been able to do any of this without my daughter, Aspyn Hoppe. She has given me the courage and the drive to pursue something better for us both. Aspyn has made countless sacrifices so that I can achieve my dreams, and I would be nothing without her. Thank you for being so courageous when your mother was faltering, for giving me a reason to smile when everything seemed bleak, and for reminding me there is more to life than academia.
