Contributors

Steven D. Brown is Professor of Social and Organizational Psychology at the University of Leicester, UK. His research interests are around social and collective remembering amongst ‘vulnerable groups’, organizational atmospheres and process philosophy approaches to social science. He is author of The Social Psychology of Experience: Studies in Remembering and Forgetting (2005, with David Middleton), Psychology without Foundations: History, Philosophy and Psychosocial Theory (2009, with Paul Stenner) and Vital Memory and Affect: Living with a Difficult Past (2015, with Paula Reavey).

Christian Gärtner is Assistant Professor of Organization Theory at Helmut Schmidt University, Germany. In his PhD thesis, he explored how different notions of the body and embodiment can serve to explain organizational behavior, in particular creative action in organizational settings. His current research covers issues of organizational design, management tools and professional service work. He has authored articles in international and national journals including Scandinavian Journal of Management, Management Decision, Journal of Change Management, Philosophy of Management and Managementforschung.

Raluca Kerekes is currently working on her doctoral thesis on change in organizational and institutional fields and organizations. From 2008 to 2012 she was a research fellow of Organization, Leadership and Human Resource Management at Friedrich Schiller University Jena, Germany. Since then she has worked as a software designer in an international healthcare corporation.

Thomas Klatetzki is Professor of Organizational Sociology at the University of Siegen. He studied psychology and sociology in Mannheim and Hamburg, worked with delinquent juveniles and directed a non-profit research institute in social work before he became Professor of Sociology at the University of Essen. His research interests include the organizing of social problem work and the organizing of violence and cruelty.

Günther Ortmann was Professor of Business Administration at Helmut Schmidt University, Hamburg. Since 2014 he has held a Research Professorship at the University Witten/Herdecke. His main interests include organization theory, strategic management and leadership. Recently his research has focused on 'organization and morality' and 'rules and rule-following'. His publications include 'On drifting rules and standards', in Scandinavian Journal of Management 26 (2010); 'Organisation und Moral. Die dunkle Seite' [Organization and morality: The dark side], Weilerswist 2010; 'Organisationen regeln; Die Wirkmacht korporativer Akteure' [Ruling organizations: The power of corporate actors], Wiesbaden 2012 (ed. with S. Duschek et al.).

Paula Reavey is Professor of Psychology at London South Bank University, as well as leading and consulting on projects at the Maudsley and Royal Bethlem hospitals. She has created and taught courses related to the psychology of mental health and distress for a number of years and is currently developing a master's program in mental health and clinical psychology, which has a firm focus on experts by experience and service users. She is the co-editor of New Feminist Stories of Child Sexual Abuse: Sexual Scripts and Dangerous Dialogues (2003, with Sam Warner) and Memory Matters: Contexts for Understanding Sexual Abuse Recollections (2009, with Janice Haaken), and editor of Visual Methods in Psychology: Using and Interpreting Images in Qualitative Research (2011). She is the co-author of Psychology, Mental Health and Distress (2013, with John Cromby and Dave Harper) and Vital Memory and Affect: Living with a Difficult Past (2015, with Steven D. Brown). She is the author of numerous articles on social remembering, child sexual abuse and sexuality, mental distress, and embodiment and space, using a variety of methodologies, including visual methods, memory work and discourse analysis.

Jeroen Veldman is a senior research fellow at Cass Business School, City University, London. He is interested in the way the historical development of the corporate form can be understood from the perspective of organization studies, and how these developments play out in and between discourses of law, finance, accounting, politics, corporate governance and public governance. His articles on these topics have appeared in the British Journal of Management, Critical Perspectives on Accounting, Business Ethics: European Review, Business and Society Review, ephemera and Management.

Peter Walgenbach is Professor of Organization, Leadership and Human Resource Management, Friedrich Schiller University Jena, Germany. He has authored and edited several books and special issues on management and organization. He has also contributed a number of chapters/articles in edited books and journals. His research focus is on institutional theory.

Elke Weik is a senior lecturer at the School of Management, University of Leicester. Her major research interests are located within institutionalist sociology. She is currently working on the conceptualization of institutional endurance in process theory and is engaged in a project on the English and German wine-making industries. Other areas of interest are process theories and philosophies as well as social theory.
