

NEW APPROACHES TO RELIGION AND POWER

Series editor: Joerg Rieger

While the relationship of religion and power is a perennial topic, it only continues to grow in importance and scope in our increasingly globalized and diverse world. Religion, on a global scale, has openly joined power struggles, often in support of the powers that be. But at the same time, religion has made major contributions to resistance movements. In this context, current methods in the study of religion and theology have created a deeper awareness of the issue of power: Critical theory, cultural studies, postcolonial theory, subaltern studies, feminist theory, critical race theory, and working class studies are contributing to a new quality of study in the field. This series is a place for both studies of particular problems in the relation of religion and power as well as for more general interpretations of this relation. It undergirds the growing recognition that religion can no longer be studied without the study of power.

Acknowledgments

This volume began as a conference, “Before Authority: Renegotiating Power and Religion,” held at the University of Chicago Divinity School in May 2012. We would like to thank all of those who attended and participated in that conference—first and foremost, the scholars that are represented in this volume, but also those who helped the conference to run smoothly: Susie McGee, Joshua Connor, David Newheiser, and Dwight Hopkins. Special thanks goes to William Schweiker, who supported the event from its inception. We would also like to thank those groups who sponsored the conference: The Martin Mary Center for the Advanced Study of Religion, The Religion and Ethics Workshop, The Theology Workshop, The Divinity Students’ Association, all which of are part of The University of Chicago Divinity School, as well as the University’s Department of Political Science.

As for the volume itself, we would like to thank Vincent Lloyd in particular for his encouragement and insight. Our editors at Palgrave MacMillan have been helpful and, more importantly, enthusiastic about the project, particularly Phil Getz and Alexis Nelson. We are also grateful to Joerg Reiger for including the volume in his series.

Josh dedicates this volume to the friendship formed and sustained with his coeditor Rick throughout the process, from initial brainstorming to publication. Rick likewise dedicates this volume to that friendship, with gratitude for Josh’s faithful dedication and generosity.
