

Contemporary World Narrative Fiction and the Spaces of Neoliberalism

New Comparisons in World Literature

Series editors: Professor Pablo Mukherjee (University of Warwick, UK) and Professor Neil Lazarus (University of Warwick, UK)

New Comparisons in World Literature offers a fresh perspective on one of the most exciting current debates in humanities by approaching 'world literature' not in terms of particular kinds of reading but as a particular kind of writing. We take 'world literature' to be that body of writing that registers in various ways, at the levels of form and content, the historical experience of capitalist modernity. We aim to publish works that take up the challenge of understanding how literature registers both the global extension of 'modern' social forms and relations and the peculiar new modes of existence and experience that are engendered as a result. Our particular interest lies in studies that analyse the registration of this decisive historical process in literary consciousness and affect.

Pablo Mukherjee is Professor and Director of Undergraduate Studies in English and Comparative Literary Studies at the University of Warwick, UK.

Neil Lazarus is Professor and teaches on the English and Comparative Literary Studies program at the University of Warwick, UK.

Acknowledgments

Many individuals have helped to sustain this book and/or its author through the course of completion. First off, I would like thank my editors and reviewers at Palgrave Macmillan for their generous encouragement and feedback. My colleagues Louis Colombo and Douglas Rivero provided early insightful commentary on the conceptual framework of this study, while Helen Morey at the Carl Swisher Library has worked tirelessly to acquire the broad array of source texts this project has necessitated. My student research assistant Hope Conroy has been a great help in locating and acquiring additional research material – and has been a good sport, tolerating my repetitive jibes about her massively circumscribed dietary habits. The students in my Postcolonial Literature and Contemporary Literature classes aided me in thinking through the novels I examine in Chapters 3 and 4 here, while my department head Jan Holston has done everything in her power to secure for me the time to pull this study together.

Finally, I need to thank Hunter Blake Walonen, Esq. for understanding that Daddy has to write some evenings in the summer and Lorien Leonard for her bountiful support and affirmation.
