Nazi Germany and Southern Europe, 1933–45

Nazi Germany and Southern Europe, 1933–45

Science, Culture and Politics

Edited by

Fernando Clara and Cláudia Ninhos

Universidade Nova de Lisboa, Portugal

palgrave
macmillan

Selection and editorial matter © Fernando Clara and Cláudia Ninhos 2016
Individual chapters © Respective authors 2016

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2016 978-1-137-55151-1

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No portion of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, Saffron House, 6–10 Kirby Street, London EC1N 8TS.

Any person who does any unauthorized act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The authors have asserted their rights to be identified as the authors of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

First published 2016 by
PALGRAVE MACMILLAN

Palgrave Macmillan in the UK is an imprint of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan in the US is a division of St Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-56746-1 ISBN 978-1-137-55152-8 (eBook)

DOI 10.1057/9781137551528

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources. Logging, pulping and manufacturing processes are expected to conform to the environmental regulations of the country of origin.

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

A catalog record for this book is available from the Library of Congress.

Contents

List of Figures and Tables	vii
Acknowledgements	viii
Notes on Contributors	ix
1 'The "invisible" export of thought': German Science and Southern Europe, 1933–45 Fernando Clara	1
2 Beyond Germanness? Music's History as 'Entangled History' in German Musicology from the End of the Nineteenth Century to the Second World War Mauro Fosco Bertola	25
3 Tourism as Networking for a Pan-fascist Mobilization before the Second World War Mário Matos	38
4 Student and Scholar Mobility between Nazi Germany and Southern/Southeastern Europe Johannes Dafinger	52
5 International Contacts in the First Years of the Spanish CSIC, 1940–45 Pablo Pérez López	68
6 The Role of Culture in German–Spanish Relations during National Socialism Marició Janué i Miret	84
7 The Longing for a 'Conservative Revolution': German Influences over the Greek Inter-war Politicization of Technology and Science Vassilios A. Bogiatzis	105
8 Portugal at the 'Third Front' Cláudia Ninhos	120

9	The Library of the Deutsches Archäologisches Institut Rom and Postwar Perceptions of German Scholarship Frederick Whitling	141
10	Tracing Eugenics: German Influences on a Greek Background, c. 1930–45 George Kokkinos and Markos Karasarinis	153
11	The Mild Eugenics Temptation in Portugal Irene Flunser Pimentel	169
12	A ‘Fascist’ Colonialism? German National Socialist and Italian Fascist Colonial Cooperation, 1936–43 Eric S. Roubinek	183
13	Breaking Points of the ‘Axis’: Austrian Scholars, Politics, and Nazi Expansion to the South Michael Wedekind	198
14	Planning a ‘Modern Colonization on European Soil’? German Scientific Travels and Expeditions to Greece during National Socialism Maria Zarifi	217
15	Citizens of the Third Reich in the Tropics: German Scientific Expeditions to Brazil under the Vargas Regime, 1933–40 Magali Romero Sá and André Felipe Cândido da Silva	232
	Index	256

Figures and Tables

Figures

14.1	von Thünen's ring model	221
------	-------------------------	-----

Tables

5.1	Scholarships, 1941–45	76
5.2	Funds for visiting professors, 1941–45	77

Acknowledgements

This book stems from an international conference that was held in October 2012 at the Faculty of Social and Human Sciences of the New University of Lisbon. The conference was organized within a three-year research project funded by the Portuguese National Science and Technology Foundation (FCT) and titled 'The Power of Science: German Science in Portugal, 1933–45' (grant PTDC/HIS-HCT/111330/2009). The aim of the conference was to go beyond the initial geographic horizons of the project and to foster a broader international discussion on science in National Socialist Germany from the point of view of its relations with Southern Europe, taking into account not only the political internationalization of the fascist regimes, but also the circulation and appropriation of knowledge and the important role that cultural relations and scientific networking played in that process.

As editors, we would like above all to thank our contributors for their patience, time, and effort. We are also grateful for the generous support of the Portuguese National Science and Technology Foundation and of the Faculty of Social and Human Sciences, New University of Lisbon. At Palgrave Macmillan, we acknowledge the enthusiastic support of Emily Russell and the helpful guidance of Angharad Bishop.

A final word of gratitude is justly due to Mikael Hård, Staffan Müller-Wille, Luís Reis Torgal, and Alfred Oritz (†) for their friendly support and valuable advice.

Contributors

Mauro Fosco Bertola is Lecturer in Musicology at Heidelberg University. He is the author of Die List der Vergangenheit: Musikwissenschaft, Rundfunk und Deutschlandbezug in Italien, 1890–1945 (2014). He has published numerous articles on the emergence of Italian musicology at the end of the nineteenth century, the role of ancient music in Italian and German radio, and the link between opera, film, and ideology.

Vassilios A. Bogiatzis is a postdoctoral researcher at the Research Center for Modern History, Panteion University, Athens, Greece. His research interests include the diffusion and circulation of fascist ideas in the Greek inter-war context. He is the author of Ambivalent Modernism: Technology, Scientific Ideology and Politics in Interwar Greece (2012, in Greek).

Fernando Clara is an assistant professor at the Faculty of Social and Human Sciences, New University of Lisbon. His publications include Worlds of Words. Travels, History, Science, Literature: Portugal in the German-speaking World 1770–1810 (2007, in Portuguese); the edited book Other Horizons: German-Portuguese Encounters in Colonial Contexts (2009, in Portuguese); and the co-edited volume Europe in Black and White: Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Immigration, Race and Identity in the 'Old Continent' (2011).

Johannes Daffinger teaches Contemporary History at the Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt. He has published a monograph on German–Soviet scientific relations before 1941 and is now working on concepts of Europe and transnational networks within the National Socialist sphere of influence. In his doctoral thesis, he investigates the history of Nazi Germany's bilateral friendship societies (zwischenstaatliche Gesellschaften).

Marició Janué i Miret is Associate Professor of Contemporary History at the Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Barcelona. Her current research interests include German–Spanish relations in the period 1870–1945, particularly the links between cultural relations and political interests. She is the author of ‘“Woe Betide Us If They Win!”: National Socialist Treatment of the Spanish “Volunteer” Workers’ (Contemporary European History 23 (3): 329–357, 2014). She is currently working on a book provisionally titled The Role of Culture in German–Spanish Relations during National Socialism.

Markos Karasarinis holds a PhD in modern history and is a regular contributor to the books section of the newspaper To Vima (The Tribune). He has been a research associate at The Institute of Neohellenic Research of the National Hellenic Research Foundation and has published articles on Social Darwinism and eugenics.

George Kokkinos is Professor of History Didactics at the Department of Primary Education, University of the Aegean, Rhodes. He has published widely on the epistemology of history, history didactics, memory, and historical trauma. His latest book is The Holocaust: The Management of Traumatic Memory (2015, in Greek).

Mário Matos is Assistant Professor of Cultural Studies (German Literature and Culture) at the University of Minho, Portugal. His research and publications have focused on the history of travel culture and intercultural relations, including several articles and chapters in books on tourism and travel writing in the Third Reich and the GDR. He is also the co-editor of Intercultural Mnemo-Graphies (2012) and Zonas de Contacto: Estado Novo/III Reich, 1933–1945 (2011).

Cláudia Ninhos is a researcher at the Institute for Contemporary History, Faculty of Social and Human Sciences, New University of Lisbon. Her research focuses on the Holocaust, National Socialism, Fascism, and German–Portuguese relations. Her publications include Salazar, Portugal and the Holocaust (2013, in Portuguese, with Irene Pimentel) and the co-edited volume The Anxiety of Influence: Politics, Culture and Science in Germany’s Relations with Southern Europe, 1933–45 (2014, in Portuguese, with Fernando Clara).

Pablo Pérez López is Professor of Contemporary History at the University of Navarre, Spain. He works in political and cultural history, with a special interest in the influence of religion in these fields, and also in the democratization process. He is the author of Personajes de fe que hicieron historia (2014), ‘Diversity and Decentralization in the Democratization Process in Spain’ (International Relations and Diplomacy 2, February 2014), and Charles de Gaulle: Una idea de Francia (2003).

Irene Flunser Pimentel holds a PhD in institutional history and contemporary politics from the Faculty of Social and Human Sciences, New University of Lisbon. She is a researcher at the Institute of Contemporary History and is working on a postdoctoral project, approved by the Portuguese National Science and Technology Foundation, titled 'The Political Justice Process Regarding the Political Police from the Dictatorship, in Transition to Democracy in Portugal'. She is author of several books about the Portuguese dictatorship (the 'New State'), the political police, gender issues, and Portugal during the Second World War. Her recent books include Opposing Portuguese Dictatorship, 1926–1974 (2014, in Portuguese), Spies in Portugal during World War II (2013, in Portuguese), and Salazar, Portugal and the Holocaust (2013, in Portuguese, with Cláudia Ninhos).

Eric S. Roubinek is Assistant Professor of History at the University of North Carolina Asheville. He is co-editor of The Weimar Republic (1918/19–1933) in the German Historical Institute's German History in Documents and Images series. His current research focuses on the shared visions of nation and race that were created through the colonial collaboration of Fascist Italy and National Socialist Germany.

Magali Romero Sá is a senior researcher at the Oswaldo Cruz Foundation, Brazil. She has published widely on the history of tropical medicine, the history of natural history, the scientific relations between Germany and Brazil in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, and the German pharmaceutical industry in Brazil. She is editor of 'Brazil–Germany: Medical and Scientific Relations Dossier' and co-author of the article 'Policy of Disseminating Germanism through the Bayer Periodicals Revista Terapêutica and O Farmacêutico Brasileiro' (História, Ciências, Saúde – Manguinhos, 2013). With André Felipe Cândido da Silva, she is writing the history of German scientific expeditions to Brazil during the Third Reich.

André Felipe Cândido da Silva is a researcher at the Oswaldo Cruz Foundation, Brazil. His research investigates the history of science, medicine, and public health, with a focus on German–Brazilian relations and on transnational intellectual networks involving Brazilian scientists. He is the author, with Jaime Benchimol, of 'Malaria and Quinine Resistance: The Circulation of a Medical and Scientific Issue between Brazil and Germany (1907–1919)' (Medical History 58 (1): 1–26, 2014) and '"The Scientist-Diplomat": Henrique da Rocha Lima and the Germany-Brazil Relations, 1919–1927' (Jahrbuch für Geschichte Lateinamerikas 50: 261–288, 2013).

Michael Wedekind is an assistant professor at the University of Vienna. He has published on Central, South and Southeast European contemporary history with regard to various forms of nationalism, twentieth-century dictatorships, and the Second World War, as well as on the history of European tourism. His studies include Nationalsozialistische Besatzungs- und Annexionspolitik in Norditalien 1943 bis 1945: Die Operationszonen 'Alpenvorland' und 'Adriatisches Küstenland' (2003) and The Mathematization of the Human Being: Anthropology and Ethnopolitics in Romania in the Late 1930s and Early 1940s (2010); he is currently preparing a study on Scholarship and Politics: Reshaping South-Central Europe, 1939–1945.

Frederick Whitling is a postdoctoral researcher at the Swedish Institute in Rome. He is presently working on the project 'Gustaf VI Adolf as Archaeologist and Patron of the Arts', on the role of the former king of Sweden in the organization of research and scholarship, which is also the subject of a conference volume that he has recently edited (2014). He is currently preparing two volumes for publication: one on foreign schools in Rome and Athens, and the other on the first quarter century of the Swedish Institute in Rome, 1925–50.

Maria Zarifi is Lecturer in History and Philosophy of Science at the Hellenic Open University in Greece. She is also a fellow at the Heidelberg Centre for Transcultural Studies (HCTS). Her publications include Science, Culture and Politics: Germany's Cultural Policy and Scientific Relations with Greece 1933–1945 (2010). She is currently working on issues regarding transcultural modernity and knowledge transfer between Germany and Greece from 1832 to 1952, focusing on medical science and public health.