Acknowledgements

There are numerous people whose professional or personal contribution to this book I want to acknowledge here. I owe thanks to Richard Perkins, subject librarian extraordinaire at the University of Warwick, for confirming that I wasn't mad when I first identified this topic as a gap in the field. The help of the BBC Written Archives Centre at Caversham, and especially Katie Ankers and Louise North, with the institutional research for the book was invaluable; thanks go to Charlotte Stevens too for her research assistance, company and navigational skills on the last visit when I almost got us lost in a wood which looked like it might have been inhabited by Pogles. I am very grateful to Karen Lury, both for making available the conference paper which was so formative for this project and for her enthusiasm about the book. Thank you, Nic Pillai, for listening to the Clangers score and talking to me about jazz. Thanks also to Loaf of The Dragon's Friendly Society for being willing to chat and to forward emails, and to Estelle Hughes for talking about Thunderbirds Are Go.

Peter Firmin and Dan Postgate were very generous in giving me permission to reproduce artwork (Figures 3.3 and 3.4) and Oliver's Letter (Figure 4.1), respectively. I am also extremely grateful to Peter for reading and checking the final draft and for supplying information about the making of the Smallfilms programmes which was unavailable elsewhere. Many thanks go to the students on Television History and Criticism at Warwick between 2011 and 2015 for humouring and often sharing my enthusiasm for old children's television, for offering insight and for encouraging me to write this book. The Summer Writing Club was an invaluable source of support, motivation and humour during the final few months – you know who you are! Marie and John – thank you for taking care of Ned during his first school summer holiday so that I could finish. I owe my biggest thanks, professional and personal, to the friends and colleagues who read and commented on drafts of this book at different stages. To Amy Holdsworth: thank you, in particular, for encouraging me to think further about telephilia and memory. To Helen Wheatley: thank you for being supportive, constructive and encouraging at every stage and in every possible way. Finally, to Karl Schoonover: the incredibly generous, meticulous and emboldening comments you made on (two!) drafts of this book were invaluable and I can't thank you enough. Johnny – thank you for being the best daddy in the world to Ned and for your outstanding Photoshop skills. Thank you to my parents (especially Mom), for sharing these programmes with me in the late 1960s and early 1970s and buying my first Pogles Annual. Finally, thank you, Ned, for helping me to remember the magic of stop-frame television.
