

Studies in the Psychosocial

Series Editors

Stephen Frosh

Department of Psychosocial Studies
Birkbeck, University of London
London, UK

Peter Redman

Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences
The Open University
Milton Keynes, UK

Wendy Hollway

Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences
The Open University
Milton Keynes, UK

Studies in the Psychosocial seeks to investigate the ways in which psychic and social processes demand to be understood as always implicated in each other, as mutually constitutive, co-produced, or abstracted levels of a single dialectical process. As such it can be understood as an interdisciplinary field in search of transdisciplinary objects of knowledge. Studies in the Psychosocial is also distinguished by its emphasis on affect, the irrational and unconscious processes, often, but not necessarily, understood psychoanalytically. Studies in the Psychosocial aims to foster the development of this field by publishing high quality and innovative monographs and edited collections. The series welcomes submissions from a range of theoretical perspectives and disciplinary orientations, including sociology, social and critical psychology, political science, postcolonial studies, feminist studies, queer studies, management and organization studies, cultural and media studies and psychoanalysis. However, in keeping with the inter- or transdisciplinary character of psychosocial analysis, books in the series will generally pass beyond their points of origin to generate concepts, understandings and forms of investigation that are distinctively psychosocial in character.

More information about this series at <http://www.palgrave.com/gp/series/14464>

Raluca Soreanu

Working-through Collective Wounds

Trauma, Denial, Recognition
in the Brazilian Uprising

palgrave
macmillan

Raluca Soreanu
Department of Psychosocial Studies
Birkbeck College
London, UK

Studies in the Psychosocial

ISBN 978-1-137-58522-6

ISBN 978-1-137-58523-3 (eBook)

<https://doi.org/10.1057/978-1-137-58523-3>

Library of Congress Control Number: 2018931386

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2018

The author(s) has/have asserted their right(s) to be identified as the author(s) of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover illustration: Xinhua / Alamy Stock Photo

Printed on acid-free paper

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by Springer Nature

The registered company is Macmillan Publishers Ltd.

The registered company address is: The Campus, 4 Crinan Street, London, N1 9XW, United Kingdom

To E.

Acknowledgements

I am indebted to the thoughtful presence of Stephen Frosh, who watched over this book from its inception to its completion, surrounding it with encouragement and intellectual generosity. I am thankful to the conversation with Judith Butler and Leticia Sabsay, which gave me an inspired moment halfway into the life of this project. I am also grateful to the participants to the symposium ‘Creativities of Protest: Imaginaries, Commons and Reparations’, which I co-organised with Stephen Frosh, at the Department of Psychosocial Studies at Birkbeck, with the support of the Birkbeck Institute for Social Research, in November 2015: Giuseppe Cocco, Vivienne Jabri, Maria Rita Kehl, Gail Lewis, Peter Pál Pelbart and Judit Szekacs. The conversations around this event have been enriching. I am especially grateful to Giuseppe Cocco, for our many hours of debating Brazilian times. A special thank you to Lisa Baraitser, for her generous touch of the manuscript moments before it met the world and for the vibrant conversations.

I am thankful to the Department of Psychosocial Studies, Birkbeck, University of London, and to the Instituto de Estudos Sociais e Políticos, Universidade do Estado do Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, my academic homes throughout the writing of this book. I am fortunate to have had many rich exchanges with my colleagues and my students. I am especially thankful to Lisa Baraitser, Stephen Frosh, Daniel Pick, Silvia Posocco, Sasha Roseneil, Lynne Segal, Bruna Seu and Laurence Spurling at Birkbeck, and to José Mauricio Domingues, Adalberto Moreira Cardoso, Frédéric Vandenberghe, and Alba Zaluar at IESP. A warm thank you to Ruth Sheldon at Birkbeck. I am grateful to the members of Sociofilo at IESP, where early versions of this work were presented. I am especially indebted to Igor Peres, who translated or revised several of my texts in Portuguese.

In Rio de Janeiro, I am thankful to Barbara Szaniecki, Astrid Kusser and Mario Chagas. I am also grateful to the community of Horto Florestal, for its generosity and inspiring resilience. I thank my psychoanalytic society, Círculo Psicanalítico do Rio de Janeiro, for its gifts. A special thank you to Ana Maria Furtado, Claudia Garcia, Perla Klautau, Carla Penna, and Neyza Prochet. I thank Carlos Lannes for our conversations, which are present in everything I think and write. Thank you to my beloved psychoanalysis social clinic, the Instituto de Estudos da Complexidade, to my colleagues there, and especially to the creativity and vibrancy of Tereza Estarque and Fátima de Lobo Amin. I am also grateful to Mônica Aguiar.

I have had the privilege to have many productive conversations on the work of Sándor Ferenczi. For this I thank André Avelar, Ferenc Erős, Jay Frankel, Giselle Galdi, Josette Garon, André Haynal, Adrienne Harris, Endre Koritar, and Judit Mészáros. A warm thank you to Judit Szekacs for our collaboration on many Ferenczian and Budapest School of Psychoanalysis projects. I am thankful to Lene Auestad, Julia Borossa, Lucia Corti and Vera Warchavchik for the conversations on psychoanalysis and politics.

I thank the Michael Balint community, and especially Ceri Dornan, Andrew Elder, Esti Rimmer and David Watt, for their openness and for inspiring more work of bringing to life the Budapest School of Psychoanalysis and its thinkers. I am grateful to the British Psychoanalytical Society, which holds materials that are very dear to me and that I draw on in my work, including the Balint Archive. I thank the Archives Committee and especially the guiding presence of the archivists, Joanne Halford and Ewan O'Neill.

I have benefited a lot from the exchanges of the collective of Universidade Nômade in Rio de Janeiro; and from the discussions with the members of the Psychoanalysis Working Group at Birkbeck College.

I am especially grateful to Ann Snitow and her many gifts. I am also indebted to Alina Csatlos. Thank you to Irina Culic, Christine Taylor and Kristina Valentinova. My gratitude also goes to the conversations with Iulia Hurducaş, Ana Maria Murg, Zsuzsa Selyem, Enikő Vincze and Alex Voicu.

An early draft of this work was presented at the International Ferenczi Conference in Toronto, in 2015, where I had the fortune to be in dialogue with Susan Baxt, Daniel Kupermann, and Daniel Traub-Werner. I thank Jessica Benjamin and Harry Kunneman for the Utrecht workshop on the topic of recognition, in 2015, where I presented my work.

I am thankful to the Wellcome Trust, for allowing me to continue the project of investigating the legacies of the Budapest School of Psychoanalysis, through my research grant on Michael Balint. I am grateful to Lisa Baraitser, Jocelyn Catty, Michael Flexer, Martin Moore, and Laura Salisbury for opening a new space for thinking while this book project was being finalised.

An earlier version of Chapter 5 appeared as ‘Soreanu, R., Something was Lost in Freud’s Beyond the Pleasure Principle: A Ferenczian Reading’, in The American Journal of Psychoanalysis, 2017, Volume 77, pp. 223–238, part of a Special Issue dedicated to the ‘Heritage of a Psychoanalytic Mind – Ferenczi International Conference in Toronto’, and edited by Endre Koritar and Josette Garon. It is reprinted here by permission of the Journal. I thank the Editors, Giselle Galdi, Josette Garon and Endre Koritar for their care for my text. An earlier version of Chapter 8 appeared in Portuguese as ‘Soreanu, R., O que pode um rosto? O que pode um braço? O levante brasileiro e a nova estética do protesto’, in Lugar Comum, 2015, Volume 43, pp. 203–225. It is reprinted by permission of the Editors.

I thank the Editors of the Palgrave Studies in the Psychosocial Series, Stephen Frosh, Wendy Hollway and Peter Redman for their close readings and their encouragement. I also thank Joanna O’Neill and Grace Jackson for their dedication and support.

The writing of this book and the research years behind it were supported through a three-year Marie Curie Fellowship, offered by the European Commission (FP7-PEOPLE-2011-IOF, project number 301787). These three years were invaluable.

Contents

1	Introduction	1
	Part I Trauma and the Symbol	15
2	Symbols	17
3	Magmas	51
4	Registers	83
	Part II Trauma and Denial	107
5	Memory-wounds	109
6	Phantasmas	159
7	Voracities	175

Part III Trauma and Recognition	189
8 Faces	191
9 Coins	201
10 Oblique Lines	207
11 Conclusions	215
References	223
Index	239