ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The research and writing of this book was a long process in the making, starting with the PhD research, writing, and defense.

I am indebted to many colleagues and friends without whom this book would never be possible.

First and foremost, I am grateful to my supervisors, Rui Medeiros and Stephen H. Legomsky, for their guidance, invaluable support, relentless incentive, and sharp critique. I would have never been able to write this book without their advice and friendship.

An important part of my research was conducted at the Georgetown University Law Centre where I was a Fulbright visiting scholar. I thank T. Alexander Aleinikoff for the opportunity and for the invaluable support.

I would also like to thank my colleagues and staff, both at Universidade Católica Portuguesa in Lisbon and at the Washington University in St. Louis Law School, where I spent time doing research.

A special word is due to Deans Rui Medeiros, Luís Fábrica, Henrique Sousa Antunes, Fernando Ferreira Pinto, Luís Barreto Xavier, and Jorge Pereira da Silva for their continuous support.

I am indebted to Rector Maria da Glória Garcia for the incentive and for the life example that always guided my path.

I thank Professors Jorge Miranda, Mattias Kumm, Miguel Nogueira de Brito, and José Lobo Moutinho for their comments and observations during the thesis defense.

My dear friends António Araújo, João Taborda da Gama, and Nuno Sampaio were there all the way to help.

This book is dedicated to my parents, Diana, Francisco, and Tomás. They know why.
