I want to express my gratitude to all who have made this book project possible. The research presented in this book was supported by a grant from the Fonds National de la Recherche, Luxembourg. I would like to express a special thank you to my academic supervisor, Prof. D. Ferring. He was open to my research proposal from the start and guided me through the various stages of the project with great insights, critical questioning and continuous support. I would also like to express my heartfelt gratitude to the late Prof. P. Weinreich whose work on identity construal processes greatly influenced the early stages of my research. In the later stages I critically benefited from Prof. J. Valsiner's and Prof. M. Barrett's vast knowledge, expertise and energy. I am lucky enough to work in the intellectually stimulating, constructive and supportive Research Unit INSIDE at the University of Luxembourg. This book would not be possible without the continuous support of my colleagues at INSIDE.

In terms of the support I received when conducting my field research, I would like to thank the Directors of the European Schools of Luxembourg for their openness towards my proposal and giving permission to conduct research projects within this multilingual and multicultural European school context. Special thanks also go to Mme A. Agustsson and Mme M. Jacobs at the Communications Department of the Ville de Luxembourg for their exceptional support. Thank you also to Mme A. Reitz of the Family of Man Exhibition and Mme E. Bossi of the Luxembourg Government Press and Information Office for their instant help concerning copyrights for images. Thank you also to the Dalai Lama's office for their prompt and positive reply.

I also offer special thanks to Harriet Barker and Amelia Derkatsch, the editors at Palgrave Macmillan, for their support, professionalism and efficiency throughout the stages of the publication process. I would also like to thank the anonymous reviewer for the helpful comments on the manuscript.

Finally, I would like to express my heartfelt thanks to my family for their interest in my work and their continuous support. My children, Philip and Anna, have also helped in a very practical way as they have quite often pre-tested questionnaires aimed at their age group. Thankfully, they don't hold back with critical comments. A special thank you goes to them for their considered insights.
