STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY

This series, prepared under the auspices of the British Sociological Association, is designed to provide short but comprehensive and scholarly treatments of key problem-areas in sociology. The books do not offer summary accounts of the current state of research in various fields, but seek rather to analyse matters which are the subject of controversy or debate. The series is designed to cover a broad range of topics, falling into three categories: (1) abstract problems of social theory and social philosophy; (2) interpretative questions posed by the writings of leading social theorists; (3) issues in empirical sociology. In addition, the series will carry translations of important writings in sociology which have not previously been available in English. Each book makes a substantive contribution to its particular topic, while at the same time giving the reader an indication of the main problems at issue; each carries an annotated bibliography, comprising a critical survey of relevant further literature.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS AND BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

I should like to thank several persons who have read and commented helpfully on the first draft of this study: in particular, Martin Albrow, T. B. Bottomore, John Carroll and Steven Lukes.

References in the footnotes to works for which full details are given in the Bibliography simply quote author's name, date of the publication referred to, and page number where necessary, thus: Mommsen (1959) p. 118. All references which carry no author's name refer to works by Max Weber.
