Studies in Social Policy

'Studies in Social Policy' is an important new series of textbooks intended for students of social administration and social welfare at all levels. The books are directly related to the needs of undergraduate and postgraduate students in universities, polytechnics and similar institutions as well as vocational students preparing for careers in a variety of social and other public services. The series includes the following topics:

the roles of different public and private institutions such as social services departments and building societies in meeting social needs; introductory guides to new technical and theoretical developments relevant to the analysis of social policy such as political theory and the newly emerging specialism of the economics of social care;

contemporary social policy issues such as the use of charges in the delivery of social welfare or the problem of determining priorities in the health and personal social services.

My first debt is to the Leeds Regional Hospital Board, and its successor, the Yorkshire Regional Health Authority, for providing the financial support for the research which lies behind this study. The members and officers of the Board and the Authority, both past and present, gave freely of their time and advice, and provided the access to papers and files without which the study would not have been possible. It would be invidious to name individuals since all of those to whom I spoke have contributed something to the book, even though not all of the comments received have been incorporated into the text.

The bulk of the research was carried out between September 1975 and September 1977, when I was Research Assistant at the Nuffield Centre for Health Services Studies, University of Leeds. Thanks are due to a number of former colleagues at the Centre for reading earlier drafts of the book, in particular Mary Ann Elston and David Towell. My biggest debt, though, is to Keith Barnard, who was Research Director on the project and who acted as editorial adviser in the writing of the book. Keith has provided invaluable advice and assistance during the last four years, and there are many points in the text where his influence can be seen. Also at Leeds, Professor Arthur Taylor in the School of History supplied useful guidance and comments at a number of points during the research.

The book in its present form has been written up while I have been at the School for Advanced Urban Studies, University of Bristol. I should like to thank Michael Hill, Ruth Levitt and Randall Smith for reading an earlier draft and giving me the benefit of their comments. Also in Bristol, Ioanna Burnell provided a lot of the support needed to overcome the difficulties encountered in the last phase of writing.

xiv Acknowledgements

Several typists made valiant attempts to cope with my writing. Special mention should be made of Olga Patchett in Leeds and Anne Merriman in Bristol.

I alone am responsible for the final text.
