ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The papers included in this volume are based on contributions to the fourth international energy economics conference held at the University of Surrey in April 1986. Rachel Alexander and Pamela Joyner of the University's Bureau of Industrial Liaison were responsible for the pleasant atmosphere and efficient administration of the conference. The financial assistance of the UK Department of Energy in enabling academic and government economists to participate is gratefully acknowledged. Liz Blakeway and Isobel Hildyard provided the secretarial input needed to produce the final text.
