Stop Press

About this book

STOP PRESS is a valuable photocopiable resource pack using the newspaper to stimulate students' interest in reading and to develop all aspects of communication skills, and greater social awareness. Real reading is the best way to improve reading, understanding and communication and this pack guides tutors and lecturers to use it to the full.

Newspapers are a huge inexhaustible and cheaply available source of highly contemporary easy-to-digest reading; in STOP PRESS Jan Hulley and David Mastin show how to exploit them as stimulus material.

Presenting current types of newspaper articles and worksheets the authors provide models for classes around vital contemporary issues: crime, life styles, personal money, consumer and social issues, never losing sight of the main focus on reading and communication skills. The package is highly flexible as tutors are encouraged to add relevant articles of appropriate difficulty from today's local and national papers - the papers their own students read.

STOP PRESS begins with simple materials, but as tutor and learner progress, so they move into material about how the papers themselves work and are put together. The pack aims to stimulate the desire to read and understand an adult text, and in the process to help develop more socially aware citizens.

Photocopying restrictions are waived for bona fide lecturers, teachers and tutors to reproduce multiple copies as teaching material within their institutions.

Jan Hulley is a Lecturer and Neighbourhood/Community Co-ordinator for Basic Education at Loxley College, Sheffield. She is committed to researching and developing access to education for those who have been unable to participate fully and has researched basic skills and the Black Literacy Campaign in New York. She has been responsible for initiatives in dyslexic tuition for adults, in open learning for basic education students, and in community integration for special needs students.

David Mastin is Production Editor of The Star, Sheffield, a multi-edition regional evening newspaper. He has worked as a Crime Reporter, and later as News Editor and Assistant Editor on The Star. His dedication to maintaining high standards and journalistic integrity in regional newspapers has been recognised with a commendation in the Production Team of the Year category of the British Press Awards for 1988 and a 'highly commended' in the 1986 Yorkshire Press Awards.
