Social work is at an important stage in its development. All professions must be responsive to changing social and economic conditions if they are to meet the needs of those they serve. This series focuses on sound practice and the specific contribution which social workers can make to the well-being of our society.

The British Association of Social Workers has always been conscious of its role in setting guidelines for practice and in seeking to raise professional standards. The conception of the Practical Social Work series arose from a survey of BASW members to discover where they, the practitioners in social work, felt there was the most need for new literature. The response was overwhelming and enthusiastic, and the result is a carefully planned, coherent series of books. The emphasis is firmly on practice set in a theoretical framework. The books will inform, stimulate and promote discussion, thus adding to the further development of skills and high professional standards. All the authors are practitioners and teachers of social work representing a wide variety of experience.

Acknowledgements

In producing the third edition of this text I owe much to many people, but most obviously to Veronica Coulshed for producing the original format which has proven to be universally popular and timeless in its appeal to social work students and practitioners. I was both honoured and humbled to be approached by Jo Campling to produce the third edition, knowing the significance of such a text for Jo because of her friendship with, and respect for, Veronica. Her support, and that of John Coulshed, have been invaluable and have been constant reminders of the significance of the project. I hope that I have not disappointed their hopes and expectations. Additionally, for her support throughout the production process, I am indebted to Catherine Gray at Macmillan.

However, my contribution to this text would not have been possible without the experiences of teaching social work at the University of Southampton. Over the years countless students and practitioners have shared their practice, and their reflections on that practice, with me in my many roles within the Department, and this has informed the development of my thinking about social work practice. Although all Departmental colleagues have influenced my reflections, one in particular deserves thanks. Peter Ford has contributed to this text in many different ways. From sharing joint teaching sessions, to commenting on the final draft of this edition, Peter has always provided rigorous and valuable feedback imbued with his enthusiasm for social work practice and education.

As ever, thanks and gratitude go to Geoff, Emily and Tim who are indefatigable in their ability to look after themselves – and me!
