Notes on Contributors

KURT DOPFER has been Visiting Professor at the International Christian University, Tokyo, 1972–5, on leave from St Gall School of Economics and Social Science, St Gallen (Switzerland). His publications include Theory of Convergence, Theory of Long Term Changes of Economic Systems and Relationship between Population and Development. He is currently conducting research on socio-economic development in Asia with the support of the Asia Foundation and the Swiss National Fund for Scientific Research.

SIR ROY HARROD, F.B.A. and recipient of numerous academic honours, was the principal tutor in economics at Christ Church, Oxford, from 1923 until 1967. During the Second World War he served full-time in Winston Churchill's private statistical section 1940–2, and subsequently in an advisory capacity. He is a Vice-President of the Royal Economic Society, having served as President 1962–4, and was Joint Editor of the Economic Journal 1945–61. He has published eighteen books, of which many have been translated into foreign languages, and numerous contributions to learned journals in a number of centres.

K. WILLIAM KAPP is a Professor of Economics at the University of Basel, Switzerland. He has also taught at New York, Columbia and Wesleyan Universities, and at Brooklyn College, C.U.N.Y. His publications include Social Costs of Private Enterprise, Toward a Science of Man in Society, Environmental Policies and Development Planning in Contemporary China and Other Essays, and numerous articles dealing with social costs, environmental policies and the economics of underdevelopment.

Notes on Contributors

HARVEY LEIBENSTEIN is Andelot Professor of Economics and Population at Harvard University, Cambridge in the United States. He has published on population theory, economic development, and the relation between microeconomic theory and organisation. His current research is on: (1) microeconomic approaches to the explanation of human fertility; and (2) the reformulation of microeconomic theory on the basis of psychological and unit postulates which differ from the conventional ones. The result of his recent research has appeared under the title Beyond Economic Man.

GUNNAR MYRDAL founded and directed the Institute for International Economic Studies in Stockholm. He is at present chairman of the board of two new research institutions: the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI) and the Latin American Institute. He is also the author of Asian Drama: An Inquiry into the Poverty of Nations, Objectivity in Social Research, The Challenge of World Poverty and An American Dilemma. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Economics in 1974.

JAN TINBERGEN has been Professor of Economics at the Netherlands School of Economics since 1933. He has advised various governments and international organisations on economic matters, and is holder of honorary degrees from sixteen universities. His many publications include Economic Policy, Principles and Design and Shaping the World Economy. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Economics in 1969.

SHIGETO TSURU is Emeritus Professor of Economics at Hitotsubashi University, Tokyo as well as being President; he is also Vice-President of the International Social Science Council. He has held visiting posts at many well-known American universities. His publications in English include Essays on Marxian Economics, Essays on the Japanese Economy and Essays on Economic Development. He has also been the editor of Has Capitalism Changed? and Environmental Disruption – A Challenge to Social Scientists. In his own language he has written extensively on the Japanese economy besides offering many contributions to professional journals.
